British Warning

By the Associated Press

London, July 28.—Great Britain gave Japan an indirect warning today that if negotiations now going on in Tokyo failed to settle British-Japanese differences, she might follow the example of the United States and denounce her trade treaty with Japan.

The warning was contained in a statement which originated in official circles and which was interpreted in diplomatic quarters as being intended primarily for Japan's benefit.

The statement said that as a result of the United States' action Wednesday Britain was considering the advisability of denouncing the British-Japanese Treaty of 1911, but that nothing would be done while negotiations were proceeding in Tokyo.

Officials Pessimistic

Officials here were understood to be pessimistic about the chance of any permanent settlement coming out of the talks which are concerned with the dispute at Tientsin, where the British and French concessions have been blockaded by the Japanese since June 14.

They also were said to be irritated by the continued anti-British campaign in North China, which they had hoped would cease during the negotiations.

Informed quarters regarded it is highly probable—now that the British position has been strengthened by United States action—that the Tokyo talks would be broken off soon and that Britain would take economic measures against Japan.

American Influence

"The action of the United States Government in denouncing their treaty," one official said, "has naturally caused circles in this country to turn their own ideas toward consideration of the utility of this method of attempting to protect their rights and interests in the Far East.

"It is recalled in this connection that Great Britain also has a commercial treaty with Japan dating from 1911.

"While negotiations for settlement of the Tientsin issue are proceeding in Tokyo there is naturally no inclination to favor a course which might prejudice the success of these negotiations. But if further examination should show it were necessary, the view is freely canvassed that such action should not be excluded."

Tokyo, July 29 (Saturday) (AP).—The Japanese cabinet studied Washington's sudden abrogation of the 1911 American-Japanese trade pact yesterday and informed sources said it decided to await developments for clarification of questions all Japan has been asking.

Whitney Prefers Dingy Cell to New

Ossining, N. Y., July 28.—Sing Sing Prison attaches disclosed today that Richard Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange, had declined the proffer of a more modern cell in the new blocks on the hill, and had chosen to remain in his dingy stone cell on the Hudson River flats. Whitney, who entered Sing Sing on April 12, 1938, to begin serving a five-to-ten-year sentence for grand larceny, was entitled by seniority to the new cell.

British Bomber Crash Kills 3 U. S. Fliers

Ship, One of 250 Ordered in America, Explodes on Test Hop

By the United Press.

Liverpool, England, July 28.—Three American aviation technicians were killed today when a Lockheed twin-engined bomber, one of 250 warplanes ordered from the United States for the British air force, exploded in the air and crashed in flames.

The big bomber, which fell apart in the air after the shattering explosion, crashed in flames near the Cheshire town of Thurstaston, 6 miles south of Birkenhead on the estuary of Mersey River, while undergoing tests prior to being turned over to the Royal Air Force.

Witnesses removed the bodies, two of which were burned almost beyond recognition.

The dead were Frank Anderline, 42, of Seattle, Wash., Lockheed test pilot; John C. Hagadon, 27, of Long Beach, Calif., inspector, and Fred Taylor, of Longview, Wash., mechanic.

The tail was torn off and fell a mile from the main heap of wreckage. The crashing plane narrowly missed a house and the heavy engine buried itself 4 feet in the ground.

The body of one of the Americans was found half way out of the cockpit, parachute partly open, in what apparently had been a last desperate effort to escape.

The plane was said to have been completed recently at the Lock-

Garfinckel Store Sale Is Approved

District Court Gives Sanction; Estate to Retain Interest

Justice Oscar Luhring in District Court yesterday approved the sale, for approximately $4,890,000, of the mercantile business of Julius Garfinckel & Co., at Fourteenth and F streets northwest, to a company formed by a group of investment banking firms.

While it was anticipated securities of the new corporation would be offered to the public, no official announcement will be made until a registration statement can be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. It was said, however, that the estate of the late Julius Garfinckel would continue to have a substantial interest in the business.

Negotiations for the sale were conducted by the Riggs National Bank, William Townsend Pheiffer and William E. Schmid, executors and trustees of the estate. In their petition to the court, they said sale of the business would enable them to carry out charitable bequests in Mr. Garfinckel's will.

These include $211,000 cash legacies to employes, All Souls' Unitarian Church, Emergency Hospital and the District Young Women's Christian Association. The will also provides for annuities totaling $48,-

10,000 Fans Mob George Raft, Tear Up Coat, Shirt

Jersey City, N. J., July 28 (INS).—George Raft, was mobbed by a throng of 10,000 fans in Journal Square tonight following a personal appearance at a local theater where his latest picture is being shown.

The frenzied fans literally tore his clothing to shreds, ripping his coat from his back and tearing his shirt in the process. Some souvenir hunter made off with his hat.

Finally a riot squad of police sped to the scene, sirens screaming, and extricated the film star from the clutches of the mob and escorted him to his New York hotel.

Barrett Maps Essential Playgrounds

Survey to Show Which Are Not Needed or Can't Be Operated

A comprehensive report on Washington's closed playgrounds, showing which can and should be opened and which are not needed or cannot be operated under existing appropriations, was promised yesterday by Lewis R. Barrett, District recreation director, for presentation early next week.

"We are now at work on this survey, which should be completed in a few days," said Barrett, following a conference with the District Recreation Board subcommittee on reorganization of the public recreation establishment.

Half of Play Areas Open

Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, a member of the subcommittee, announced that personal appointments under the new set-up will be disclosed when the six-member board meets Monday.

The only salient information he volunteered on yesterday's conference was that the subcommittee will recommend temporary appointments of lower salaried employes and permanent appointments of assistant directors and others in the higher pay brackets.

According to figures presented by Barrett, 106 playgrounds and recreation centers of all kinds were in operation yesterday, or about one-half the total number in the District. Of those in use, 71 are for white children and 35 for colored.

Shortage of Workers

At the close of the working day 154 WPA workers were on assignment under Barrett's supervision. Only 95, however, were detailed as play supervisors on public grounds. Thirty-five were performing recreational duties for private agencies—Boys Club, Friendship House, Langston Terrace, Barney Neighborhood House and so on—11 were employed in the drafting room, eight in the training program and five in the administrative office.

The local WPA recreational project provides for 200 workers, but the shortage of qualified white supervisors and the rule that persons who have been on work re-

D.C. Doctors Offer Plan to Curb Crashes; Pedestrian Hit, Dying

While a 65-year-old pedestrian lay near death at Casualty Hospital yesterday, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia offered a six-point safety program including a recommendation that speed of automobiles taking patients to hospitals be curbed for the sake of walkers.

George T. Bancroft, manager of a valet shop, was struck down by an automobile in front of his home, 2712 Good Hope road southeast, when he stepped from a curb on his way to breakfast. Physicians said his skull was fractured and that his condition was critical.

Police held Jack Moralis, 51, of Brandywine, Md., who they said was at the wheel, on a charge of reckless driving.

The recommendations of the Medical Society were issued after a month's study by a special committee on automobile accidents. They will be submitted to the District Commissioners for conferences on the society's program.

Consideration was given the question of requiring physical examinations for driving permits, the society said, but no recommendation was made pending further study. The recommendations of the committee were that:

Applicants for renewal of driving permits be required to have their eyes re-examined.

The form signed by physicians recommending that persons be permitted to drive "with glasses" or "without glasses," be amended to include "with or without glasses," to avoid possible arrest of drivers whose visual defects do not affect their driving ability.

N. Y. Gangs In War of Annihilation

Dewey Asks $25,000 Posted for Lepke, Orders Guard for Members of Mob

By the Associated Press

New York, July 28.—An extraordinary campaign to capture Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, a fugitive industrial racketer pictured by District Attorney Dewey as involved in a "war of extermination" against his former gangster henchmen, was put under way tonight.

Dewey took these steps:

Arranged with Police Commissioner Valentine to put a bodyguard on every former Lepke associate—"whether he likes it or not."

Asked the city to post a reward of $25,000, dead or alive.

Disclosed that 1,000,000 "wanted" circulars were being rushed from the police department presses for public broadcast.

Said the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Narcotic Bureau were working in this "single co-ordinated effort throughout the whole of the United States."

They Shot the Wrong Man

All this was touched off by the assassination of Isadore Penn, a quiet Bronx householder without a serious enemy in the world. Penn, Dewey said in agreeing with an earlier theory by the Bronx prosecutor, Samuel Foley, apparently was killed by gunners who mistook him for Philip Orlovsky, a Dewey witness.

And when Penn sank quietly to the sidewalk with five slugs in his body, it was the last, although mistaken, engagement to date in what Dewey described as a war of attrition in which at least four men somehow connected with Lepke—two of them witnesses—had been murdered since the first of the year, several had been wounded and two had disturbingly vanished.

This "series of assassinations," as the district attorney termed them, was reminiscent of the gang wars of the prohibition and early post-prohibition eras—when Vincent Coll, "The Baby Killer," was cut to pieces with machine gun bullets as he stood in a drug store telephone booth; when Jack ("Legs") Diamond, called the "Clay Pigeon" because he'd been shot so often, was found vulnerable at last in Albany; when Arthur Flegenheimer (Dutch Schultz) was mowed down in a Newark saloon.

Fugitive Two Years

"For 15 years," Dewey said, "Lepke and Gurrah (Jacob Shapiro) have, in my opinion, been the most dangerous industrial racketeers in the United States. From the beginning of the racket investigation four years ago my office has conducted an investigation of the dominance by Lepke and Gurrah of the garment business; of many aspects of

600,000 Pray For Chicago Child, Asleep 16 Months

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—Six hundred thousand of the faithful joined in a prayer for little Mary Ellen Reardon tonight.

The 3-year-old child was stricken with sleeping sickness on March 25, 1938. She has lain, mute and almost motionless, in her tiny bed for 16 months—a beautiful, blue-eyed, golden-haired youngster.

On the next eight Friday nights the participants in the services—estimated to number 625,000 by the Rev. James R. Keane—will offer up their supplications for the slumbering girl in Roman Catholic churches in the United States, Canada, Old Mexico, China and India.

Mary Ellen's mother, Mrs. Daniel Reardon, never has lost hope.

"I am certain in my heart," she said, "that the prayers will be answered."

'Minor Difficulties' Delay Alliance

Paris, July 28, (U.P.).—French officials admitted tonight that "minor divergencies" are delaying parallel British and French announcements that Moscow negogations for a triple alliance are on the verge of conclusion.

Earlier in the day it had been said all points of difference in the 15-weeks-old negotiations had been overcome.

The French officials hastened to add that no change would be made in the Anglo-French decision to send military missions to Moscow early in August to work out a division of defense zones and responsibilities under the projected triple alliance.

Senate Slashes $850,000,000 From Loan Bill; Caucus Fails To Unite House Democrats

Called 'Harmonious,' Meeting Refuses To Back Passage of Specific Measures

By John B. Oakes.

Glowing with outward harmony, a caucus of the embattled House Democrats last night unanimously adopted a resolution in support of "the great social and economic program" of President Roosevelt, after first knocking out all reference to specific New Deal legislation.

As originally proposed by Representative Gavagan, of New York, the resolution included what one member called "inferential references" in favor of the Administration's housing and lending bills.

But on the suggestion of Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, one of the leaders of the conservative Democratic "economy bloc," all mention of housing and lending was stricken from the resolution, which was thus reduced to a declaration of general principles without any binding force.

A succession of speakers supported Woodrum's motion and pleaded for party harmony, with the result that Gavagan himself withdrew the objectionable words.

Interpreted as a Defeat

The change in the resolution was interpreted privately as a signal for the "urban-liberal" bloc that first demanded the caucus. This group had hoped to bind all party members to vote for the remaining New Deal bills scheduled to be called up this session.

However, so far as the caucus itself was concerned, the liberals accepted the results with the best of grace, and members pouring out of the House chamber at the conclusion of the meeting reported that it had been "a love feast."

The one flare-up of the evening occurred soon after the caucus had been called to order while Gavagan was speaking on behalf of his resolution. In the midst of his pleas for the housing and lending programs and for party unity, Representatives Clark, of North Carolina, and Rankin, of Mississippi, leaped to their feet.

Applause Drowns Reply

The angry Southerners, it was reported, demanded of Gavagan why, if he was looking for party harmony, he insisted on pressing his anti-lynching bill. Fresh in their minds was the announcement the New Yorker had made during the afternoon that a sufficient number of signatures had been obtained on a petition to bring the anti-lynching bill to the floor of the House early in the next session.

Why, the Southerners asked, did

44 Soviet Officers Reported Jailed In New 'Purge'

London, July 28 (INS).—A Warsaw dispatch to the Daily Express tonight said 44 high military and naval officers of the Soviet Union have been jailed, some of them charged with seeking to provoke war with Japan and others with attacking Premier V. M. Molotov's "pro-German policy."

Thirty-two of those awaiting trial in the new "purge," the dispatch said, are army and navy leaders of Russia's Far Eastern forces, part of which are now embroiled in warfare with Japanese-Manchukuoan forces at Outer Mongolia's eastern frontier.

These include, according to the Warsaw message, Gen. Gregor Stern, former chief of the First Far Eastern Red Army; Air Force Commander Gen. Michael Lapin and Gen. Boris Krishov, former adjutant to Marshal Vassily Bluecher, builder of the Far Eastern Red Army, who has disappeared from public life.

Gen. Stern was dismissed from his command and replaced yesterday by Gen. M. Popov.

Wreck Injury List Climbs to 57

Grand Canyon, Ariz., July 28 (AP).—The list of injured in derailment of a Grand Canyon special train last night climbed to 57, Santa Fe officials disclosing that 37 had been hospitalized and 20 more given first-aid treatment. Earlier reports had listed only nine injured.

Two locomotives and four coaches, carrying 190 canyon visitors, jumped the rails while proceeding through a deep cut, blasted out of almost solid rock.

Tydings Seeks Curb on Labor Loans to Party

Retaliation Seen For Lewis Charges Against Garner

By the United Press.

John L. Lewis' personal and political feud with Vice President Garner drew its first serious repercussion on the Senate floor late yesterday when Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, introduced a rider to the lend-spend bill to restrict labor union contributions to party campaign funds.

Tydings, anti-New Dealer who successfully fought President Roosevelt's "purge" campaign last year, referred indirectly to Lewis' United Mine Workers Union when he introduced his amendment, recalling a $500,000 loan to the Democratic Party by "one organization." The U. M. W. lent the Democrats that sum in the 1936 campaign.

Senate Is Silent

The Senate, which is presided over by Garner, has been silent, as a body, regarding charges by Lewis that the Vice President is a "labor-baiting, poker-playing, whisky-drinking, evil old man."

But prior to Tydings' action, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, criticized the labor leader's statement, saying, "I am sorry that a certain expression was made yesterday by an outstanding man who has been . . . apparently a great champion of labor."

"I have been greatly set back and my cause (restoration of prevailing wages of skilled WPA workers) has been greatly impaired by

President Calls Hatch Bill Good but Vague

Has Arrived at No Decision Whether He Would Sign It

President Roosevelt yesterday severely criticized the Hatch bill prohibiting "pernicious" political activity on the ground that its provisions were extremely vague and gave no clear idea of what political liberties would be left Government employes if it becomes law.

His criticism evoked from Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, author of the bill, the reply that the language used in the bill was the same as that in the civil-service rules. This language was chosen, he declared, because the rules "have been interpreted and construed throughout the years."

Mr. Roosevelt said, in response to a question at his press conference, that he was absolutely in favor of the objectives of the bill, but he would not venture an opinion as to whether it was constitutional, since this question was interwoven with the extent to which it would restrain the political liberties of Government personnel.

No Decision on Signing

He made clear that he had arrived at no conclusion as to whether he would sign the bill. The President left last night for a week-end cruise on the Potomac River, taking with him a bundle of documents on the questions raised by the bill.

He said laughingly that he intended to discuss the bill with the Army and Navy. The remark had reference to the fact that Brig. Gen.

Dr. William J. Mayo, Last Of Famed Brothers, Dies at 78

By the Associated Press

Rochester, Minn., July 28.—A perpetuating medical foundation that was the dream of a country doctor 70 years ago become a monument tonight to the healing genius of the famed Mayo brothers as persons from all walks of life paid tribute to the last of the renowned pair.

As the body of Dr. William J. Mayo, better known as "Dr. Will," was made ready to lie in state, the board of governors established ten years ago when the brothers laid down their surgical instruments, continued to administer the foundation and clinic.

Dr. Will died in his sleep early today of a sub-acute perforating ulcer, an abdominal ailment he had specialized in treating. He was 78, and had grieved constantly since the death of his partner-brother, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, in Chicago May 26.

Stricken shortly after he returned from a winter vacation in the Southwest, Dr. Will underwent a stomach operation at the clinic last April, and never fully recovered.

There is but one Mayo left to carry the family name. He is Dr. Charlie's son, Dr. Charles W. Mayo, a surgeon on the clinic staff. Dr. Charlie's other son, Dr. Joseph G. Mayo, was killed in an automobile accident in 1936. Their other children were girls.

But the Mayo tradition is being carried on. Dr. Will's two daughters married surgeons connected with the clinic.

Dr. [illegible] Waters, Phoebe's husband, is a director of the clinic.

Dr. David C. Balfour, Carrie's husband, is a director of the Mayo Foundation.

Measure Cut in Half; Rider Would Let WPA Workers Keep Jobs After 18 Months

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate yesterday ripped two complete sections from the President's lending bill, eliminating all funds for toll highways and railway equipment in a 12½-hour session that saw the measure slashed by $850,000,000.

When the Senate adjourned at 11:37 last night, only $1,640,000,000 remained of the program that originally had totaled $2,800,000,000.

Still determined to salvage what remains of the program, Majority Leader Barkley ordered the Senate back in session at 11 a. m. today, and will drive for final action tonight.

The Administration's lone victory of the day was defeat by a 40 to 38 vote of the McCarran amendment restoring prevailing (union) wage scales on strike-ridden WPA projects. Leaders successfully fought the prevailing wage proposal, fearing it would bog down the bill and defeat it in the House.

Would Repeal WPA Rotation

But WPA labor snatched one victory from the pitched Senate fracas when an amendment by Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, which virtually would repeal the relief act's 18-month work relief roll rotation requirement, was approved, 43 to 35, to save approximately 650,000 WPA jobs.

Slashing rail and highway key sections were:

An amendment by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, rejecting by a 45-to-32 vote the bill's $350,000,000 allotment for RFC construction of new railway equipment, for loan, purchase or lease to the railroads.

An amendment by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, eliminating by a 40-to-38 count $500,000,000 loan funds for constructing express toll highways, bridges, tunnels and by-passes.

Reverses Previous Vote

Byrd's body blow at toll highway provisions of the bill was delivered early in the day, after the Senate reconsidered Thursday night's vote approving the bill.

The bill became a target for all manner of catch-all amendments, ranging from a foreign-silver-purchase ban to prevailing-wage efforts.

An attempt by Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, to prohibit further Treasury purchases of foreign silver failed, 41 to 38. Once before the Senate had approved this amendment on the President's money bill, only to see it die in conference.

It was at the urgent behest of the Administration leadership that the McCarran WPA prevailing-wage amendment was defeated.

Promises Another Try

"If you adopt this amendment you will get no prevailing wage and you will get no lending bill," Senate Majority Leader Barkley had warned the chamber.

He referred to threats of a controlling majority in the House Banking Committee to kill the lending bill if the prevailing wage scales were added as a rider.

But Barkley promised prevailing wage supporters they would have another try at restoring WPA wage scales next week, probably on the third deficiency bill.

Leaders also voted against the Murray amendment abolishing the 18-month WPA mandatory work limitation, but it passed, nonetheless, by a 43 to 35 vote.

Murray read a letter from Works Projects Commissioner Harrington in support of his amendment, and warning that 650,000 WPA workers must be removed from the rolls as of August 31 if it failed of adoption.

As the Murray amendment was phrased, it would still give preference to those who have been job-

U. S. May Use McNinch in Power Suits

Retainer of $10,000 a Year, Desk in One of Departments Likely

Frank R. McNinch resigned chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, said yesterday it was "entirely possible" he will handle special cases assigned to him by the Government when he sets up in private law practice this fall.

Intention to resume private practice was disclosed in his letter of resignation, made public yesterday by President Roosevelt.

McNinch, it is understood, has tentatively arranged to act as special counsel for the Government in litigation involving power interests, although he may handle some other assignments, including cases involving communications. It is not likely, however, he will handle any radio cases.

To Get $10,000 a Year

He will likely receive, according to reliable reports, the maximum retainer fee paid by the Government to special attorneys—$10,000 a year. Expectation is that his office will be located in one of the departments. He will not be attached to the Justice Department, however, as a special assistant to the Attorney General.

McNinch said he planned to take a cruise, either to the Caribbean or to Europe, before starting his law work. He will be gone, he said, for 30 to 45 days.

A sufferer from a stomach disorder, he resigned as chairman of the FCC because of ill health. He wants to regain his health completely before starting to work again. The President has appointed James Lawrence Fly, general counsel of the Tennessee Valley Authority, to the vacancy on the commission. Fly will succeed McNinch as chairman.

McNinch said he had been invited to handle certain Government cases. He said, however, he had not made final plans regarding his law practice and would make none until he had returned from the cruise.

"Purge" Fight Revived

In his letter of resignation, McNinch reiterated his recommendation that the FCC be reorganized along lines of a bill introduced by Senator Wheeler, Montana Democrat. The e is no prospect the bill will be acted on at this session. Question has been raised as to whether it will be revived at all.

"The procedure for handling the work of the commission," McNinch declared, "has been radically reorganized and certain personnel changes effected, all of which have contributed toward a marked improvement in the efficiency of the commission, but, in my judgment, it is not possible to reach the maximum of efficiency in the public interest with the present personnel and within the inadequate framework of the communications act."

The reference to personnel recalled the "purge" which McNinch put into effect in the commission last fall. Commissioners T. A. M. Craven and George Henry Payne opposed him in the fight. Senate Republicans charged that the Wheeler bill, which would cut down the number of commission members from 7 to 3, would "purge" Craven and Payne from the commission.

The President, in reply, said he accepted McNinch's resignation "with reluctance and sincere regret." Mr. Roosevelt said he hoped the less onerous work McNinch has mapped out would enable him to recover his health speedily and expressed "gratitude and appreciation" for what he had done at the FCC and previously as chairman of the Federal Power Commission.

Court Spectators Locked Up Till Raids Are Made

Toms River, N. J., July 28 (AP).—Judge Percy Camp kept 75 spectators locked up in his courtroom today while he instructed Sheriff Mathias to raid 80 places where he said gambling machines were maintained.

Judge Camp, who earlier in the day conducted a raid in Seaside Heights, informed the grand jury that "outside racketeers have taken over" the county.

Ten persons were arrested in the Seaside Heights raid, where police seized three truckloads of horse-race betting boards, dice and card paraphernalia and $300 in cash.

New York, July 28.—The Todhunter School, of which Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is coprincipal, will be consolidated with the Dalton Schools, it was learned today when the State Board of Regents, at a meeting at the State Building, gave its formal approval for the move.

The Todhunter School, which has an annual enrollment of about 100 girls between the ages of 6 and 18, was founded in 1900. Mrs. Roosevelt taught classes in history and current events and served actively as coprincipal of the school until 1933.

USHA Bill Is Delayed by House Leaders

Steagall's Absence, Democratic Caucus Given as Reasons

The Administration's bill to expand the United States Housing Authority was shunted aside by a harassed House leadership yesterday as opponents of the measure threatened to tear it apart when it reaches the floor.

Consideration of the bill, a major item in the President's lending program, was deferred until Tuesday when Speaker Bankhead explained that Chairman Steagall of the House Banking and Currency Committee, floor manager for the housing bill, was tied up in an executive session.

Other friends of the housing measure said postponement had been decided upon because of the imminence of the Democratic caucus scheduled for last night, where the housing bill was to be one of the principal topics.

Claim Bill Is Licked

Opponents of the housing legislation—which would double the lending capacity of USHA to $1,600,000,000 and provide for total annual subsidies of $73,000,000—claimed that the bill had been deferred in a desperate attempt to whip together a sufficient number of votes to pass it. "We have it licked anyway," maintained one of the measure's Democratic antagonists.

That Republican opposition to the housing bill, as well as to the entire lending program, would be nearly unanimous was indicated by Minority Leader Martin after a conference of the entire Republican House membership.

Representative Wolcott, of Michigan, ranking Republican member of the Banking Committee, attacked the housing bill as paving the way for ultimate annual subsidies of $450,000,000; the lending bill as a "subterfuge" and an Administration-approved amendment to the Federal home loan bank act as "a danger to the savings banks of the Nation."

Smith Alien Bill Fought

It was intimated in some Congressional quarters that the housing measure may be shelved for the session if it appears likely to be defeated next week.

In place of the USHA measure, the leadership called up for discussion yesterday the alien bill sponsored by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia.

The bill, which would tighten the deportation laws and make it a crime to encourage disobedience among members of the armed forces, was bitterly attacked by a small band of liberals as "a Gastapo bill." The measure was tied up so long by proposed amendments that the final vote was postponed until today.

An amendment facetiously offered by Representative O'Toole (Democrat), of New York, would have prohibited any member of the army or Navy to read newspapers, magazines or books, "including the Bible and the Congressional Record."

"This amendment may seem absurd," O'Toole shouted, "but it is no more absurd than the provisions of Title I of the bill," which forbids anyone to distribute literature urging disobedience, and permitting such literature to be removed under search warrant from private homes.

Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, declared that in some States violation of traffic laws might render an alien eligible for deportation under the bill.

Immigration Probe Sought

Meanwhile, at the other end of the Capitol, Senator Holman (Republican), of Oregon, indicated he would press for action on his resolution to investigate the Immigration Service.

Asserting that there have been "many leaks of aliens into the United States," Holman said that "our immigration and deportation laws are not being efficiently enforced."

U. S. Bomber Sets 7 Speed Marks

By the Associated Press

The Army announced yesterday that one of its 16-ton "flying fortress" bombers set a total of seven new national records in "routine" speed tests in the last week.

The records were for speed for 1,000 kilometers with pay loads of 1,000, 2,000 and 5,000 kilograms, respectively; for 2,000 kilometers without pay load, and for 2,000 kilometers with pay loads of the same weights carried in the 1,000-kilometer tests. The course flown covered Langley Field, Va., Floyd Bennett Airport at New York and Bolling Field at Washington.

Corrigan's Finding CAA Refutes His Wrong-Way Flight

Douglas Corrigan didn't make a wrong-way flight. His sense of direction is too uncanny. The proof:

With no compass or North Star to guide him, he found the office of Oswald Ryan, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, in the vast labyrinth of the Commerce Department Building yesterday. He made but one try, whereas natives of Washington, looking for offices in the building, go the wrong way several times.

And once there, the subject of the new airport, down on the river, arose. Someone gestured with his hand in what might have been the airport's direction. "Wrong way," said Corrigan, laughing. "It's back over this way"—and the outlook from the window couldn't have given such a stranger here as Corrigan a clew.

He seemed to know every direction, but the one in which his fortunes were heading. Any flights planned? Nothing now, said Corrigan. Where is he going from here. "I don't know at the moment," said Corrigan.

He and his new bride had just called by the Aeronautics Authority to shake hands with a few people. This done, Corrigan steered the way from the building again with no trouble at all.

Hatch Bill Vague, Roosevelt Holds

Edwin M. Watson, his military aid and also one of his secretaries; Capt. Daniel Callaghan, his naval aid, and Rear Admiral Ross E. McIntyre, his personal physician, went along with him on the cruise. White House Press Secretary Stephen T. Early, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins and Frank Walker also accompanied the party.

The civil service rules banning political activity apply only to Federal employes in the classified service. The Hatch bill would extend these prohibitions to thousands of others—all except policy-making Government officials.

The President, in response to a question, agreed that John B. Colpoys, local United States marshal and for years a Democratic leader here, would be prevented by the bill from taking an active part in a political campaign.

Stresses Implications

Attorney General Murphy, who is studying the constitutionality of the bill, was confronted yesterday with the question whether a Federal district attorney could become, under the bill's restrictions, a candidate for judge. Charles F. Uhl, Federal district attorney at Pittsburgh, is seeking the Democratic nomination for common pleas judge of Somerset County, Pennsylvania. If the bill becomes law, he may either have to withdraw or resign as district attorney.

Mr. Roosevelt stressed the numerous implications of the bill. Questions raised, he said, are what can Government employes do and what would they be prohibited from doing. Could they make voluntary contributions, or sit on the platform at political meetings? He asked jokingly whether they would have to sit in the rear or whether they could applaud.

Since persons receiving Government benefits would be barred from political activity, would farmers receiving parity payments be barred?

Hatch declared that, under civil service rules, Government employes can attend political rallies as spectators, "but cannot serve as an officer for political clubs or attend a political convention as a delegate."

Ex-Navy Officer Seeks to Change 'America' Melody

Richmond, Va., July 28 (AP).—John W. W. Cumming, of Norfolk, retired United States Navy commander, asked the aid of Gov. Price today in "Americanizing" the musical score for "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

Proposing a new musical setting which he composed for the century-old poem, Commander Cumming told the Governor the melody to which "My Country 'Tis of Thee" is usually sung in this country "is that of the national anthem of Great Britain, Denmark and Switzerland" and before the World War also was the national anthem of the German Empire.

His musical setting changes the melody from "three-four' 'to "four-four" time and, he says, makes the tune "croonable" as a man marches or walks, in rhythm with his step.

$50,000,000 More Voted for Air Defense

House Group Approves 2d Research Center, Pilot Training Funds

The House deficiency appropriations sub-committee yesterday approved funds for establishing a second aeronautical research center in the United States and provided initial money for launching a Nation-wide civilian air training program.

An additional 50-odd million dollars was voted for national defense as the group neared final action on the session's final appropriation bill. It will raise the total outlay for the Army and Navy this year to well above $1,800,000,000 and give President Roosevelt virtually 100 per cent success on his defense recommendations.

Members of the sub-committee said funds would be recommended for another major air research plant similar to that at Langley Field, Va., despite the fact that it had been disapproved twice previously by the committee. Army and Navy aviation chiefs have testified that an additional research center is necessary if America is to regain the lead in aircraft performance it lost to Germany two years ago, and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh personally appeared before the group to indorse the project.

Site Still in Doubt

It was indicated, however, that the Administration proposal to establish the laboratory at Sunnyvale, Calif., will not receive complete indorsement. Advocates of other proposed sites have appeared before the sub-committee and it is probable the location will not be fixed in the bill. A $10,000,000 research plant is contemplated under plans of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, which will administer it.

Approval of an appropriation of $5,675,000 for civil air training will mean that flying courses will be established at some 200 colleges and universities this fall. A total of 15,000 students will be trained as pilots under the plan, forming a back log of partially qualified reserves for an emergency.

With the approval of this item and funds for constructing a $1,500,000 military road in Panama, the special defense program submitted by President Roosevelt last January will have been carried out almost completely by Congress. It will be the only phase of the Administration's legislative program approved without major change.

Nearing $2,000,000,000

Committee members indicated a request of $25,000,000 for purchasing and storing strategic war materials probably will reach the floor materially curtailed, while a proposed fund of $17,000,000 for construction of army air bases should receive approval. Action has not yet been taken on a $2,000,000 Navy dirigible, it was said.

A total of $1,783,187,841 has already been voted by Congress for defense purposes—$1,574,975,309 in direct appropriations and the remainder in contract authorization. Budget estimates aggregating nearly $67,000,000 more are before Congress of which $50,000,000 probably will be carried in the third deficiency bill to be reported next week by the House Appropriations Committee.

Wallace Opens World Poultry Congress in Ohio

Cleveland, July 28 (INS).—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace opened the seventh World's Poultry Congress and Exposition here this afternoon.

Forty-one countries were represented when the congress opened today and it was estimated 500,000 visitors would attend during the sessions which continue through August 7.

Secretary Wallace, stressing the international aspect of the congress, said in part:

"In these days of unusual tension, a meeting such as this is a symbol of the good things which are destined to come to the entire world.

"In science there are no monopolies, no tariffs and no embargos. There is nothing to remind us of international striving and much to encourage us in the hope that eventually the human race will learn to work together in peace."

Increase in Aid For Aged Perils Security Bill

House Members See It As First Step Toward Townsend Program

By the Associated Press

A Senate proposal to give an additional $80,000,000 a year to the needy aged is blocking enactment of far-reaching changes in the social security law, because some legislators believe it would be the first step toward the Townsend pension program.

Amendments to the social security law have been approved by both the Senate and House but a joint conference committee has been trying unsuccessfully for two weeks to adjust differences between the two measures.

Members said yesterday the conferees had made no progress on the most controversial proposal before them—an amendment by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, requiring the Government to match State old-age assistance outlays $2 to $1.

Cost $80,000,000 a Year

The two-to-one matching provision would be effective up to a maximum monthly payment of $10 from the Government and $5 from the States to needy persons 65 and older.

Connally estimated his plan would cost the Government an extra $80,000,000 a year. He said it would benefit every State equally, but particularly would aid poorer States which now can contribute only a few dollars on the existing 50-50 matching basis.

House members of the Conference Committee were reported to have insisted they would prefer no social security revision to a bill carrying the Connally proposal.

Senate members thus far have been adamant in their support of the Connally proposal, but one well informed Senator said yesterday the group might change its attitude.

Would Freeze Levies

Of major importance among security amendments is one approved by both chambers which would freeze for three years the present old-age insurance tax of 1 per cent on employers and 1 per cent on employes.

There has been talk among committee members that a simple resolution to accomplish this purpose might be proposed if it appeared the entire social security program could not be enacted.

Under the present schedule, the taxes would increase to 1½ per cent on both employers and employes next January 1.

One controversial amendment adopted by the Senate to require all States to put up at least $10 a month for old-age assistance tentatively has been rejected by the conference committee. Under the proposal, by Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, more than half the States either would have to increase their present old-age assistance payments or cease receiving old-age grants from the Government.

Nye Proposes Congress Rule Foreign Policy

By the Associated Press.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, proposed yesterday that Congress establish a joint committee of House and Senate members with which the Executive department would be required to consult before making any final decisions on foreign policy.

In a statement criticizing the Administration's unsuccessful efforts to repeal the arms embargo section of the neutrality law, the North Dakotan said he and others of the so-called "neutrality" bloc proposed to seek re-enactment of the expired "cash-and-carry" provisions when revision of the neutrality law is attempted in the next session of Congress.

"We can stay out of war if we will break the possibility of selfish profiteering by Americans from other people's wars, if we will curb Executive power to secretly move toward war," Nye asserted.

Democrat Caucus Fails to Heal Split

Gavaghan go over to the Republican side to obtain signatures for the petition? It was reported that Gavagan's reply was drowned in loud applause for Rankin and Clark.

Immediately after this interlude, Woodrum made his proposal to generalize the resolution on Democratic policies. His suggestion was indorsed by most of the speakers who followed.

The man who has become konwn as the leader of the conservative Democrats of the House, Representative Cox, of Georgia, spoke strongly for party harmony. Cox, who as member of the powerfdl Rules Committee has had much to to with upsetting Administration plans on housing and wage-hour legislation, asked for unity but pointed out that every man has the right to his convictions.

The full Presidential program was indorsed, it was reported, by Majority Leader Rayburn. The Republicans have never had a sonstrurtive program, Rayburn charged as he underlined the necessity for harmony among Democrats.

An ominous warning of Republican victory unless the Democrats close their ranks is understood to have been sounded by Speaker Bankhead. He pointed out that the minority has been voting almost en bloc and urged, in effect, that the Democrats try to do likewise—on the other side. The Speaker received an ovation that was easily heard through the closed doors of the House chamber.

Adm. Gherardi's Funeral Set Here on Tuesday

The funeral of Rear Admiral Walter R. Gherardi, who died in Bohemian Grove near San Francisco last Monday, will be held in Arlington Cemetery with military honors Tuesday at 11 a. m. Rear Admiral Gherardi served in Washington for many years and made his home in Chevy Chase.

Capt. Morton L. Deyo, U. S. N., will head the escort which includes the Navy Band, a battalion of marines and a battalion of sailors. Services will be conducted by Chaplain Capt. R. D. Workman.

Lee M. Eddy, of Missouri, Renominated By President to Railroad Retirement Board

Lee M. Eddy, of Missouri, yesterday was renominated by President Roosevelt as a member of the Railroad Retirement Board for a 5-year term beginning August 29.

LEE M. EDDY

The President also sent to the Senate the nomination of Denis W. Delaney to be Works Progress Administrator of Massachusetts, and Thomas B. Hassett, Fitchburg, Mass., to be Internal Revenue Collector for the district of Massachusetts.

President Roosevelt signed into law the bill permitting railroads seeking adjustments of their debt and capital structures to file reorganization petitions in United States district courts.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee reported favorably a bill authorizing the sale of 175,000 bales of Government-owned cotton at a subsidy price of about $6 per bale to France and Switzerland for storage for emergency purposes. The measure was sponsored by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who said he understood negotiations were under way to sell an undetermined amount of Government-held cotton to Spain in a cash deal.

Reports fro mMadrid indicated the Spanish government had tentatively agreed to take 250,000 of the 11,000,000 bales now held by the Commodity Credit Corporation under Government loans.

If the sale is made to Spain, the $7.50 per bale export subsidy offered Thursday by Secretary Wallace is expected to figure in the deal.

Senator Gurney (Republican), South Dakota, announced he had agreed to postponement of action for this session of Congress on his bill to clear the military record of Capt. Oberlin M. Carter, of Chicago, former Army captain convicted by a military court in 1899.

Accused of accepting a financial "kickback" in connection with an Army Engineers' project at Savannah Harbor, Carter has sought for years to have his Army record cleared.

The House Rivers and Harbors Committee approved a substitute measure to replace the omnibus rivers and harbors authorization bill which passed the House but was tabled by the Senate Commerce Committee.

The substitute measure would authorize more than 100 preliminary examinations and surveys of navigation improvement projects but would authorize actual construction of only nine. The House committee added a survey of St. Patricks Creek in Maryland.

McNutt Disallows Expense Of Magazine Praising Him

Indiana House Organ Carried His Picture On Cover Page; Security Chief Writes: 'I Have Been Embarrassed'

Paul V. McNutt, in his first major decision yesterday as Federal Security administrator, directed the Social Security Board to disallow publication costs of the June-July issue of the Indiana Unemployment Compensation Adviser, which carried his picture on the cover page and an editorial praising him.

It was McNutt's answer to criticism provoked by the fact that he was featured in the pamphlet. The cost of putting out the issue, it is understood, was about $128. As a result of McNutt's order, the Indiana unemployment compensation division will be "docked" this amount. Who will be out the money, or how it will be made up, was not clear.

Clarence A. Jackson, State unemployment compensation director, is author of the editorial, and presumably was responsible for the cover page picture, underneath which appeared a graph showing McNutt's upward climb, step by step, toward the Presidency in 1941. Jackson put into operation the gross income tax law enacted by the Indiana Legislature when McNutt was Governor.

In a memorandum to Oscar Powell, executive director of the Social Security Board, McNutt said that, "although this publication is nothing but a house organ, I have been embarrassed by the cover page of this particular issue, evidently the result of thoughtless action of overenthusiastic friends."

"I am anxious," he said, "to avoid anything which could possibly be construed as promoting partisan or political interests in connection with the work of this agency.

"Therefore, it is my desire that the Social Security Board disallow a sum equal to the cost of this particular issue, and that instructions be issued that the policy outlined above be followed in connection with any partisan activity."

McNutt has been assigned offices in the old National Institute of Health administration building at Twenty-fifth and E streets northwest.

$850,000,000 Cut From Lending Bill

less three months, over those 18 months on the rolls, but would provide Administration discretion to retain those who have not been able to get other jobs, or whose discharge would hinder a project.

Both the McCarran and Murray amendments have been sought by striking WPA workers, many of whom have been besieging Senators in the lobbies to grant these measures.

Leaders said defeat of the prevailing wage rider substantially improved the chances of favorable House action on what is left of the lending bill. They voiced the view that the Murray amendment alone would not meet death-dealing opposition to the bill in the House.

McCarran, sought at the same time to abolish WPA pay differentials in the same wage areas and to lift relief wages in the South to higher levels.

The differential abolition move went down to defeat with the prevailing wage amendment.

Reconsider Motion Tabled

Clinching the Senate's rejection, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, moved to reconsider the vote and Majority Leader Barkley successfully tabled that motion.

Way was cleared for striking the toll highway provisions of the bill when Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, moved to reconsider Thursday's night vote retaining the funds in the bill.

Approves Byrd Amendment

By a vote of 42 to 39, the Senate ordered reconsideration and then proceeded to approve, 42 to 38, the Byrd amendment it had rejected the night before.

Elimination of the $500,000,000 earmarking means that none of the vast loan sum may be advanced to the States for construction of bridges, tunnels and by-passes as well as express highways and toll roads.

Federal Works Administrator Harrington himself opposed the section of the prevailing wage McCarran amendment removing WPA wage differentials. In a letter to Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, he said it would result in forcible dropping from the rolls of about 280,000 workers. Adams read the letter and attempted to strike out the differential feature of the McCarran amendment. This the Senate refused to do, but immediately thereafter rejected the prevailing wage plan in toto.

Earlier the Senate had voted, 74 to 8, to include in the lending bill an amendment authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture "to refinance farm mortgages on which the payments, periodically due, exceed the normal farm income available for debt service."

Sponsored by Wheeler and Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, this amendment if approved by the House would result in a general scaling down of debts of farmers unable to meet payments on existing mortgages.

The roll call by which the Senate struck a $500,000,000 authorization for highways from the Administration's lending bill:

Arizona Killer Enters Prison Death House

Florence, Ariz., July 28 (AP).—The steel door of the Arizona Penitentiary death house closed today on Robert Burgunder, 22-year-old former college debater who a few hours before was sentenced to execution in the lethal gas chamber for murder.

In Phoenix, Superior Judge Arthur T. La Prade set Burgunder's execution for October 6, but an appeal to the State Supreme Court will give the youth many more months of life.

Burgunder was convicted of murdering Jack Peterson, Phoenix automobile salesman, and still faces a charge of killing Ellis M. Koury, another salesman. The two were shot as they lay bound on the desert April 29, and Burgunder fled to Tennessee in their car.

Anti-Lynch Bill Forced Onto House Floor

Rules Committee Discharged by Petition; Action Now Unlikely

The Gavagan anti-lynching bill, stormy issue that has entangled Congress for years, yesterday was forced to the House floor when 218 members signed a petition discharging the Rules Committee, which had had the measure piegonholed.

However, no action at this session is in prospect.

Under the rules, however, the measure will have to lie before the House until August 14 when the body will have to vote on whether to consider it. Should Congress adjourn before then, as seems most likely, Representative Gavagan (Democrat), of New York, who represents the Harlem district, said action would be forthcoming during the January session.

The House previously passed an anti-lynching bill by Gavagan but it was lost in a Senate filibuster. Gavagan's new measure provides for Federal investigation and prosecuting in lynchings and makes State and local governments responsible for death and injury due to mob action.

Gavagan hailed the signing of the petition as a victory "for the Democratic processes of government" and said it "is a great boon to the hearts and the spirits of millions of American citizens who believe in justice and equality before the law and the enforcement of the constitutional provisions of the right of trial by jury."

Workers Alliance And Parker Talk On WPA Layoffs

Fourteen officials of the District Workers Alliance met yesterday with George Parker, newly appointed District Works Progress deputy administrator, to discuss local white collar projects and ask Parker's plans on carrying out the dismissals required under the current appropriation act.

Parker, who termed it a "pleasant discussion," told the organization leaders that no specific action could be indicated pending completion of a statistical report he had requested. He said the report would indicate what projects would have to be rescheduled and would provide a basis for dismissals and rehiring without racial discrimination.

The official said that if the figures revealed a disparity in the ratio of colored employed and seeking WPA employment, he would "balance it out."

FBI to Wind Up District Police Inquiry Today

Federal agents who have been questioning Washington policemen in connection with the numbers racket will conclude their investigation today.

It is expected that the Commissioners soon will approve the promotion of 14 veteran police officers. The promotions were held up because of the investigation, and presumably on the request of the Attorney General.

Leche Testifies At La. Inquiry

New Orleans, July 28 (U.P.).—A United States district grand jury investigating wholesale graft and corruption recessed tonight after questioning former Gov. Richard W. Leche, of Louisiana, for more than four hours in two sessions.

Leche, suffering with arthritis, yesterday went into the grand jury room for ten minutes. He was recalled today and the jury spent most of morning and afternoon sessions talking to him.

United States District Attorney Rene A. Viosca said Leche would be the last Federal grand jury witness newspapers and press associations would be permitted to identify without running the risk of contempt of court citation.

32 Scientists Map Antarctic Program Here

Meeting Achieved 'Excellent Results,' Says Dr. Bowman

Scientific possibilities of the Government's first official expedition to the Antarctic were plumbed yesterday by a specially summoned congress of biologists, meteorologists, zoologists, physicists and virtually every other kind of scientist.

Turning their backs on such mundane considerations as the Monroe Doctrine, sovereignty and Nazi ambitions in the Western Hemisphere, the 32 scientists applied themselves solely to the prospective gains which may accrue to the pure and practical sciences.

Dr. Bowman Presides

"The meeting produced excellent results," announced Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University.

Dr. Bowman, an authority on geography and polar explorations, presided over the session, which was held in the National Academy of Sciences Building.

Among those present, besides Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, who will command the expedition, were F. Alton Wade, who will be senior scientist and second in command; Richard B. Black, scheduled to go along as an engineer and surveyor, and Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, who will have charge of the unique cruiser sledge, or "wheeled dinosaur," whose construction he is now supervising.

Expedition members who did not attend yesterday's meeting are Paul Siple, the Boy Scout of Byrd's 1928 trip to the South Pole, and Finn Ronne, a Norwegian, who will be in charge of the dogs.

Wade and Black are assistant field representatives of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions, Interior Department. Dr. Poulter is director of the Research Foundation, Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago.

Dr. William M. Mann, director of National Zoological Park, came down to put in a bid for some penguins and whatever other Antarctic fauna the party might collect.

Health problems of the expedition's membership, which will number 180 men, were discussed by Dr. W. T. Harrison, of the U. S. Public Health Service.

The State Department had two representatives, Samuel W. Boggs and Hugh S. Cumming, jr. Other Federal officials present included Director W. C. Mendenhall, of the Geological Survey; Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; W. B. Bell, chief of the wildlife research division, Biological Survey; Director Lyman J. Briggs, of the Bureau of Standards; Rear Admiral L. O. Colbert, director, Coast and Geodetic Survey; Capt. G. S. Bryan, Navy hydrographer; Edward Bailey, Bureau of Fisheries, and Dr. Remington Kellogg, National Museum mammalologist.

The expedition is expected to sail in mid-October. Weather information will be exchanged with Argentina and Australia and some 900,000 square miles of undiscovered land is expected to be charted.

Charles E. Berry Funeral Will Be Held Today

Services for Charles E. Berry, 73, former president of Berry & Whitmore, jewelers, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today in Hines funeral home. He died yesterday at his residence, 1401 Fairmont street northwest.

Beginning his career with Galt & Bros., Mr. Berry formed his own company, which remained one of Washington's leading jewelry houses until ten years ago.

A charter member of Temple-Noyes Lodge, No. 32, of Masons, Mr. Berry at various times belonged to the Rotary Club, Blue Ridge Rod and Gun Club, Board of Trade, Racquet Club, Jewelers' Club (Philadelphia), Machinery Club (New York), Wellwood Club, Columbia Golf Club and the Angler's Club, of Maryland.

Surviving him are his wife, Edna Berry, and five children, Henry P. Berry, Charleston, W. Va.,; George and Charles Berry, of Washington; Mrs. Hudson Grunewald, Silver Spring, Md., and Mrs. Edward Murphy, of Pittsburgh.

Barrett Surveys Needed Play Areas

ller for 18 months must be dropped automatically are the chief obstacles to achievement of the 200 quota, Barrett explained.

Eight more WPA supervisors will be hired August 1, but the same number will have to be dropped two days later, he said. In August he expects to hire 22 more, but a number almost as great will have to be dismissed, because of the 18-month cutoff.

Consequently prospects are not bright that a large percentage of the 106 to 108 closed playgrounds will be opened before school starts in the fall, since every play area in operation must be supervised.

As Many as Last Year

"At certain hours during the day we have taken counts of children at play in the various grounds to help us in deciding which ones may be justifiably kept open and which might be closed," Barrett said.

If any are closed because of lack of patronage, the supervisors would be used to reopen other playgrounds or bolster the operating staffs of those which now have an inadequate number of play directors. One of Barrett's handicaps has been the enforced use of skeleton staffs at large recreation centers in order to spread available workers over the greatest number of playgrounds.

He pointed out that approximately the same number of grounds is open now as at this time last year.

6 Typewriter Firms Accused Of Monopoly

Conspiracy to Fix Prices Is Charged by U. S. Jury in New York

By the Associated Press

New York, July 28.—Six typewriter manufacturing firms and their presidents were indicted by a Federal grand jury today for conspiracy to fix prices and operate a monopoly in the $50,000,000-a-year industry.

Those indicted: Underwood Elliott Fisher Co., of Delaware; Underwood Elliott Fisher Co., of New Jersey; Remington Rand, Inc., of Delaware, with offices in Buffalo; Royal Typewriter Co., of New York; L. C. Smith and Corona Typewriters, Inc., of Syracuse, and L. C. Smith and Corona Typewriters, Inc., of New Jersey.

Also, Philip D. Wagoner, president of the Underwood firms; James H. Rand, jr., of Remington Rand; Edmund C. Faustmann, of Royal, and Hurlbut W. Smith, of the L. C. Smith and Corona firms.

The indictment alleged that the defendants formed a coalition in 1930 to eliminate competition and that they now controlled 95 to 98 per cent of the trade. The executives often met, it said, in the Union League and Cloud clubs in New York.

The Government acted under the Sherman anti-trust law, accusing the defendants of entering into written agreements relative to prices, discounts, and trade-in allowances for used typewriters and setting a standard price on new machines. Prices on new machines were raised from $105 to $115.50 in three years under the agreement, the indictment said.

Maximum penalties upon conviction are two years in jail and a $10,000 fine for each individual and $10,000 fine for the firms.

Man With 15 Traffic Tickets Escapes Police

Bond $100 on Each, He Walks Out of Court Without Settling

Sought more than a week before his arrest Thursday, Paul Shelton, 24, bill collector, disappeared from Traffic Court yesterday, leaving 15 traffic charges behind him.

Judge Walter J. Casey issued an attachment for him and police issued a lookout through the District and nearby States.

Shelton failed to appear at the Sixth Precinct to post collateral on charges of speeding and passing a stop sign July 21. He had been released by Motorcycle Policeman W. L. Sherer to get the money.

Charges Pile Up

Sherer made an investigation which led to charges of driving on a revoked permit, failure to change address, third-offense speed and the stop-sign count. Unable to find the defendant, the policeman obtained warrants.

Thursday Policeman L. H. Peterson, Sixth Precinct, arrested a suspect he believed to be Shelton in the 200 block of Vine street northwest. The man produced a permit identifying himself as "James R. Ridgeway." Peterson filed charges of obtaining a permit by misrepresentation, failure to surrender a suspended permit and larceny of a third permit which was found in his possession.

The suspect's permit had been revoked after he was convicted of speeding in February and again in April.

He Walks Out Free

Eight other policemen stepped forward at Traffic Court yesterday with warrants for the man. There were six parking warrants, another stop sign charge and one count of failing to lock the ignition of his machine.

Judge Casey set bail at $100 on each charge and continued the cases a week.

After court had adjourned and Shelton was awaiting a bondsman, he disappeared.

What You've Found Out Counts, Opines Tarkington, at 70

Hoosier Writer Says He's Still Too Young To Be Philosopher

By the United Press.

Kennebunkport, Me., July 28.—Booth Tarkington sat in his old boathouse on the Mousam River today, puffed on a 5-inch, monogrammed cigarette and observed:

"All that really counts is what you've found out—and sometimes it doesn't seem to be a great deal."

It was the eve of the Hoosier author's seventieth birthday, but the creator of such standard bits of Americana as "Penrod and Sam" refused to feel his age, even though completing his allotted three score years and ten.

Before making the remark which seemed to sum up his philosophy, Tarkington denied possessing one.

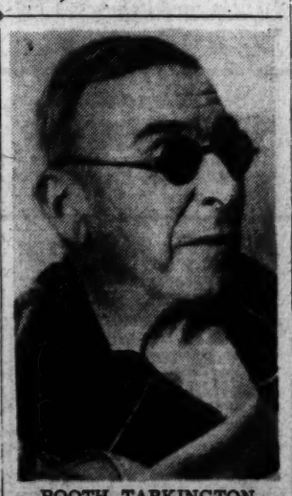
"It takes thinking to evolve a philosophy," he had said. "Young people don't have any because they feel things keenly. When your emotions are affected you do less thinking. By 'young people' I mean everybody under 80; and I'm still young enough not to have any philosophy."

Tarkington does not look 70 nor, when he removes his dark glasses and his hat, even 60. Full of life, he carries a cane but rarely uses it for support. His face has been bronzed by sun and wind.

There would be no birthday party tomorrow, Tarkington said, adding:

"My father lived to be 91. When he was 88 he said he was not old enough yet to glory in it. So I certainly have no cause to celebrate."

Forty years have elapsed since Tarkington wrote his famous "The Gentleman From Indiana," but his pen is still active. Only last Wednesday he mailed the manuscript for his latest book, "a work of nonfiction, about some old portraits from the point of view of the audience."



BOOTH TARKINGTON

For aspiring writers, he had this advice:

"Fiction, to be excellent, must come from a depth of feeling and be done without thought of any financial reward. It is necessary to concentrate on a job properly done and let the price to be obtained be a secondary affair. I think the detached point of view is best. Let the author be a sort of god on a Mount Olympus, neither hating any character nor liking him too much, but just telling what happened."

Democracy Not Vital to Church, Baptists Told

German-Born Pa. Doctor Replies to Attack on 'Isms'

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, July 28.—A British churchman's appeal for Christians to "make safe the religious foundations of a true democracy" brought dissent today from Italian and German-speaking messengers to the sixth Baptist World Alliance Congress.

"I cannot for conscience's sake make the fate of Christianity dependent upon that of democracy or any other political system," Dr. W. A. Muller, German-born Philadelphian, declared in an unscheduled reply to an address by the Rev. M. E. Aubrey, of London.

Lack of Understanding Felt

Aubrey, former moderator of the federal council of the Free Church of England, described totalitarianism as a foe of free religion, predicted its collapse because "tyrannies do not last," and said liberty "will rise again in Germany, Russia and Italy."

Dr. Muller voiced his dissent after translating a speech by the Rev. Paul Schmidt, Berlin pastor, who said German messengers to the congress had found "real lack of understanding of conditions in Germany."

The Philadelphian, a seminary professor, argued that since all political systems are temporal and "ultimately break down," he felt "to bind up Christianity with any political system would imply that it, too, could fail."

Calls Problems Skirted

Dr. Muller charged that in some respects there was less freedom of discussion in this congress of the Baptist World Alliance than in the 1934 session in Berlin, declaring:

"In Berlin our American and English brethren talked loudly and strongly on the burning issues of racialism and nationalism with particular reference to the German situation, but in Atlanta, strangely, we have been very dexterously skirting some burning problems that affect countries like America, England and the so-called democracies."

He did not designate the "burning problems."

that unfortunate statement," McCarran said. "I regret it more than any man who might address the Senate today."

Lewis, as president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, has supported McCarran's measure

President Declines Comment

President Roosevelt, in his press conference, declined to comment on Lewis' denunciation of the Vice President.

Some time ago, he asserted, the same gentleman had something to say about him and there was no comment.

It was recalled that in 1937, Lewis rebuked the President for having used the Shakespearian phrase, "A plague on both your houses," to express his displeasure with both sides in a steel strike. The C. I. O. chief said at that time:

"It ill behooves one who has supped at Labor's table, and who has been sheltered in Labor's house, to curse with equal fervor and fine impartiality both Labor and its adversaries when they become locked in deadly embrace."

Under Tydings' amendment, which is similar to the law enacted in Great Britain after the 1936 general strike, labor groups and other organizations would be prohibited from contributing to political campaign funds unless an assessment of the membership was made for that specific purpose.

Garner Urged to Reply

In discussing the $500,000 loan to the Democratic campaign coffers, Tydings declared that the men who had contributed toward the general fund "didn't know they were paying it as a political assessment."

A letter urging Vice President Garner to "go at" John L. Lewis—and describing the C. I. O. leader as "still a 'white-haired boy' at the White House"—was read to the House at request of Representative Hoffman.

The letter was from former Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, whose political defeat last year was sought by Mr. Roosevelt, who wrote:

"God love you and preserve you!

"The vicious attack on you by J. Lewellyn Lewis, America's menace No. 2—I put his Communist associates as No. 1—can only endear you all the more to the people of our country. . . .

"All he has ever had are eyebrows and bluster. . .

Charles Vadakin To Head Doctors Hospital Here

Charles E. Vadakin, manager of the Kahler Hospital at the Mayo Clinic since 1937, has resigned that post to become superintendent of the new Doctors Hospital here, it was announced yesterday.

The hospital, under construction in the 1800 block of I street northwest, is scheduled to be opened next January.

Vadakin, who has arrived here to begin organizing his staff, entered hospital work in 1930 in his home town as an employe of the Marietta (Ohio) Hospital. In 1935 he became associated with the Kahler Corporation, which owns and operates a hospital in connection with the Mayo Clinic. Two years later he was made manager of the Kahler Hospital.

He is a member of the American College of Hospital Administrators and of the American Hospital Association.

More Rain Forecast for Drought Area

Considerable Moisture Needed to Cut Crop Losses, Save Timber

Showers throughout the North Atlantic States, forecast for today by the Weather Bureau, promised further relief in the New England and New York "dust bowl," as the U. S. Forest Service yesterday said the long dry spell threatened loss of valuable timber in the Northeast.

In Washington, showers are expected today, with a taste of cooler weather tonight, the Weather Bureau said. A brief rain sent the mercury down from a maximum of 87 at 1:30 p. m. to 82 at 3 p. m., but the temporary relief was followed by a return of 86 degrees at 5 p. m., officials said.

More Rain Needed

The shower here gave a taste of the widespread rains which nourished dried fields and cooled off sweltering cities over much of the Nation. The Associated Press reported that drought areas in Pennsylvania and New England were soaked, but in most places the relief was only temporary.

Farm experts in Pennsylvania said that more rain was needed to restore the grain and vegetable crops, and that many crops already were lost. Upstate New York reported that more rain was needed after 3.68 inches of rain fell in Albany in 24 hours. Elsewhere in the Northeast, official opinion considered that the drought was pretty thoroughly licked.

In the Far West a record-breaking heat wave continued, sending the mercury to 117 at Lewiston, Idaho, and causing fire loss in farm and timber land in Washington and Oregon. A mild tornado wrecked six of ten unoccupied cabins at Emporia, Kans.

Timber Threatened

Meanwhile the Forest Service said that both standing and stored timber were threatened with heavy loss by the Northeastern drought.

The service, working since last fall to clear New England areas of the millions of feet of timber felled by the September hurricane, has found the drought drying up the natural lakes and ponds where salvaged timber is being stored, thus threatening it with decay.

The club's annual dinner and golf tournament will be held on August 8 at the Congressional Golf Club, it was announced.

the famed brothers will be held at 4 p. m. Sunday. Mourning Rochester citizens, who knew the brothers simply as Dr. Will and Dr. Charlie, will view the body when it lies in state Sunday.

Saga of Medicine

The saga of the brothers' rise that culminated in improvements in surgical technique began on the dusty roads of southeastern Minnesota in the 70's when they followed their father, Dr. William Worrall Mayo, on his medical missions.

In August, 1883, a toronado shattered much of Rochester village, leaving many dead and dying. Dr. William Worrall Mayo converted his home into an improvised hospital and the sons were called upon to help.

One day the Mother Superior of a nearby convent that was contributing nurses to the hospital told Dr. William Worrill Mayo there should be a large hospital in Rochester perpetuating his work. When Dr. Mayo protested, he was too old, the nun looked to the boys.

"They will carry out the work," she said.

How well they did is reflected in the clinic where Drs. Will and Charlie used their surgical skill for rich and poor alike.

Dr. Charles took his medical degree from the Chicago Medical College a few years after Dr. Will was graduated by the University of Michigan in 1885. They returned to Rochester and joined their father in his work.

Both Specialists

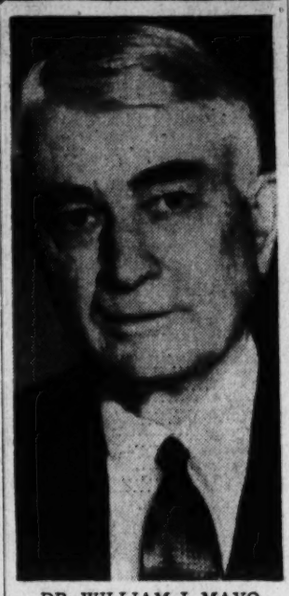
Each specialized. Dr. Will led in cancer, particularly the abdominal type. He developed diagnoses which quickly showed whether tumors were benign or cancerous. His treatment of cancer brought a creditable percentage of cures. Dr. Will developed important techniques also for operations on stomach ulcers.

Dr. Charles was generally recognized as the father of goiter surgery.

It was always "my brother and I" between the affectionate Mayos. When fame brought their clinic patronage from all over the world, the brothers inaugurated their much-lauded policy of free medical care for the underprivileged.

The brothers' philosophy was expressed by Dr. Will:

"These moneys and property can never inure to the benefit of any individual. The people's money of which we have been the moral custodians is being irrevocably returned to the people from whom it came."



DR. WILLIAM J. MAYO

The Mayos have contributed more than $3,000,000 to the Mayo Foundation, a medical research institution they were instrumental in establishing in connection with the University of Minnesota medical school.

Dr. Will was born in LeSueur, Minn., June 29, 1861. When he was 2 years old the family moved to Rochester where the father, Dr. William Worrall Mayo, became provost surgeon for southern Minnesota recruiting stations of the Federal army. A daughter, Gertrude, and the second son, Charles Horace, were born in Rochester.

Will was graduated from Rochester High School when he was 16 and was then eligible to enter medical school, but his father thought he needed better preparation in science and languages and he spent three years on those subjects, one at a private school and two more at Niles Academy. In 1880 he entered the medical school of the University of Michigan and was graduated M. D. in 1883.

A Great Hunter Comes to Town, But Is Difficult to Track Down

479th Maharaja of Tripura Slips Into Hotel's Side Door With 58 Pieces of Luggage; Wants a 'Good Time' Here

The 479th Maharaja Manikya Bahadur of Tripura, a mighty prince and great hunter, came to Washington yesterday but it was very difficult tracking him down.

He slipped through a side door to his elaborate suite in the Mayflower Hotel, his 58 pieces of baggage went up as unceremoniously and the hotel could only say that the Maharaja had arrived.

True to Washington technique, someone in the impressive entourage had a press release on the Maharaja. "His Highness is a man of many parts. He maintains a small but very efficient military force with him which in time of war would link up with the British regular army. He owns a beautiful collection of Oriental objets d'arts, to be seen at his palaces in India where he entertains in truly Princely style."

Wants "Good Time" Here

Partly it was the Maharaja's keen interest "in the great democracy, for whom he entertains a great admiration," that brought him on his first visit to the United States. "He wishes to see as much as he can, to meet as many interesting people as he can, to have as good a time as he can and to prove that a ruling prince can be just as good a world citizen as any one else."

The territory he governs was explained:

"Tripura is one of the most ancient states in India. The Maharaja's family have been ruling princes for centuries. The Mogul emperors never succeeded in conquering Tripura state, and, after many fruitless efforts, duly recognized her independent status . . . His Highness has been ruling for the past 12 years and has proved himself a most able administrator."

"He is a great hunter and has shot an immense amount of big game," said the publicity. But to track down the Maharaja entailed outwitting Capt. Maharajakumar, D. K. Varma Bahadur, Lieut. Col. Owen C. Pulley, Kumar R. K. Dev Varma Bahadur, Lieut. Thakur J. C. Dev Varma, Yuvarani Saheb of Baria, Mr. D. D. Dutta (personal office assistant to the Tripura Durba); Mr. M. C. Dev Varma, Mr. B. B. Dev Varma (his highness' attendants), and, most formidably, F. N. Wagner, F. R. G. S., ace courier for the travel agency escorting the Maharaja.

The matter was being talked over with Wagner, "whose specific role it is to escort the Maharajas of India when they travel abroad," when a knock came on Wagner's door. An Eastern gentleman looked in mysteriously, an issue agitating behind his eyes.

The Maharaja was on the elevator! Things began clicking. A gentleman wearing a monocle was on the elevator. The entourage was preparing to move. A whispered clew: "The Maharaja is only 31." Several in the car seemed that age. But one, an Eastern man in a light suit and a yellow tie that undertoned a tremendous smile, was permitted to step out first.

The Maharaja left through the side door, the entourage streaming after him—just another tourist out to see the Monument or a good movie.

Carmody Lauds Gravelly Point Airport Work

Makes Tour in Blimp; Dredging Day and Night; Site 40% Filled

Engineering and filling operations at Gravelly Point Airport were praised yesterday by John M. Carmody, Federal Works Administrator, after an inspection tour in the Goodyear blimp Enterprise.

Four dredges are working day and night pumping sand and gravel into the airport site, which is about 40 per cent filled, officials of the Civil Aeronautics Authority pointed out.

The 200-foot wide runways are being filled first and areas between them will be closed afterward, it was explained.

Sinkholes Prevented

Carmody said the special type of filling now underway would prevent sinkholes from appearing in the landing field when present operations are completed.

When the field is turned over to the Government for use it will be nearly 14 feet above the mean high water level and nearly 2 feet higher than the flood stage three years ago, officials explained.

Carmody was accompanied on the trip by Robert H. Hinkley, and Edward P. Warner, chairman and member, respectively, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; Col. Sumpter Smith, chairman of the engineering committee for Washington National Airport, and Alan Johnston, general counsel of the Federal Works Agency.

Tamiroff Tops Cast in Tropic Film at Earle

'Magnificent Fraud' His Tour de Force; Excellent Stage Bill

"THE MAGNIFICENT FRAUD." Paramount picturization of a story by Charles G. Boothe, adapted to the screen by Gabriel Gilpert and Walter Ferris, with Akim Tamiroff, Lloyd Nolan, Mary Boland, Patricia Morison, Ralph Forbes, Stella Dunn, Ernest Cossart, George Zucco, Robert Warwick, Robert Middlemass, Abner Biberman and Donald Gallaher. Directed by Robert Florey. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

The Earle's new film is titled "The Magnificent Fraud," and that is what is known as leading with the chin. The temptation for forthright and vehement agreement is strong, but we shall attempt to avoid the trite and obvious, and merely say that "The Magnificent Fraud" is a pretty preposterous picture.

The chief trouble with this Paramount panorama of South American intrigue is that it lacks the soft songs of Bing Crosby and the sly humor of Jack Benny's "Rochester" to give it the tang of the living. At first, one hopes that the "peasants" will give out with "Rio Rita" or "Flying Down to Rio," but further association reveals that this is a deathly serious story.

Akim Tamiroff, however, reveals himself in the varying and occasionally interesting disguises of Cyrano, Henry VIII and Napoleon. This tour de force is effective, but the voice is always that of Tamiroff.

Plays Multiple Roles

Mr. Tamiroff, you see, is a first rank actor, whose head is wanted in Paris for a crime committed, we are thankful to say, long before our plot begins. Now he is playing in a cafe in a picture postcard country south of the Equator, where the President is highly regarded, for he is making a loan from an American for $10,000,000. But El Presidente is the victim of a plot and succumbs in the presence of his close friends and advisers, all of whom not only want to succeed him, but also are annoyed that El Presidente should die before he was able to consummate the American loan.

But Lloyd Nolan is from Chicago and he knows a thing or two! A close advisor to El Presidente, he persuades the French actor to assume the role of the dead leader until the loan is consummated. This the game Frenchman does to the very bitter end.

Mixed up in all this, besides the hard-working Tamiroff's disguise, is a strange love affair between Nolan and attractive Patricia Morison, an affair which attempts to be a smoldering passion beneath the tropical moon, but which merely succeeds in bringing a new high to vulgarity. Yesterday's first house snickered.

Even Mary Boland apparently has her mind on other things in the midst of all this activity. The role of an opera singer, retired, sounds like our Mary, but her heart seems to be on the alligators. Patricia Morison certainly looks her part, although her reading is monotonous.

On the Earle stage things are vastly different. The variety show is neat, funny and fast-moving.

Minevitch Rascals Score

Borrah Minevitch's Harmonica Rascals are in the top spot. While Borrah is not with them this trip, their music is as good as ever and, we thought, their comedy a lot funnier. The Rascals have a slick and boisterous act and that little fellow who is forever getting pushed around has introduced some tantalizing timing to his pantomime. Johnny Puleo is his name and he is a Washington boy who has been with Minevitch more than ten years.

The other acts are good, too. Mack, Wilkey and Dare seem to enjoy their slow motion antics as much as we did, and the Rolic-Aires, a girl and four boys, offer truly original arrangements of some modern ballads. McDonald and Ross are a versatile dance team. Miss Ross being particularly graceful.

Those invaluable Roxyettes are on hand, of course, with some new routines, featuring their first Earle hula, a dance which, after all their previous exertions, must seem a lazy sort of business to them.

Excelling the feature film is the Ernest Truex comedy. Mouse-like Mr. Truex plays a fellow who thinks his wife is a kleptomaniac and we laughed the woman in front of us right out of her seat.

RICHARD L. COE.

Metropolitan

Jack Benny is being a "Man About Town" for another week in a repeat engagement at the Metropolitan. If you are looking for film fare which is easy to take and fun to sit through, this is your dish.

Jack is a would-be philanderer who finds himself labeled as one, and involved in a thick fog of misunderstandings and insane parlor maneuverings from which he finally extricates himself and wins the girl of his fancy, who would be Dorothy Lamour, who finds time to pose fetchingly in a sarong and warble a couple of smooth ditties.

Edward Arnold frowns through a part as one of the husbands who considers Jack a menace to the felicity and sanctity of the family hearth.

"Rochester," famed for his rasp-voiced blunderings on the Benny radio show, proves to be an able comedian on the screen. He is a natural.

The Three Stooges stage a comeback in a comedy which is not up to their usual par. There is only a minimum of head-whoppings and a dearth of slappings, whammings and boppings.

In the newsreel is a clear picture of the way in which events shaped up to the summer-of-1939 peacetime mobilization of the European nations.

"SECOND FIDDLE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Harry Tugend, based on a story by George Bradshaw, costarring Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee and Sonja Henie, with Edna May Oliver, Mary Healy, Lyle Talbot, Alan Dinehart and Minna Gombell. Directed by Sidney Lanfield. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Reviving fragrant memories of its original hit almost two decades ago, handsomely costumed, effectively staged and both acted and sung in traditional fashion by a talented and well-chosen company, "Irene," one of the most popular of the standard American musical comedies, yesterday aroused the enthusiasm of capacity audiences at Loew's Capitol Theater.

BELL

Necessarily condensed to about half of its full length for presentation in a motion picture theater, "Irene" still is a breezy, tuneful and engaging work that retains the important plot incidents in its skeletonized story and practically all of the song hits from one of the most melodious scores within memory. The Capitol is a pretty huge playhouse for this sort of thing, but with judicious microphone placements and the spirited work of both cast and chorus in lines, songs and dances, it was projected across the footlights with the proverbial "bang" at yesterday afternoon's second performance.

No need now to go into detail concerning the romantic fiction of the shop girl who was thrown with society's upper crust through a reasonably logical succession of musical comedy events. A brief but coherent version of that movement of the 12 scenes remains in the curtailed version. Happily, however, the adapters have had the good judgment to skim over the story in order to lay full stress upon the lilting beauty of the Tierney music. Practically all of the old favorite songs are there—"Alice Blue Gown," "Castle of Dreams," "Irene," "Talk of the Town," "We're Getting Away With It" and "To Be Worthy." They are sung with zest by a group of excellent voices.

Principals All Experienced

The vocal burdens of the play—and most of the action, too—are carried by Jane Winton, charming in the title role; Ann Heath, as Eleanor Worth; John Barker, opposite Miss Winton, as Don Marshall; Jerry Delaney, as "Mme. Lucy," and Bartlett Simmons, in the "heavy" part of J. P. Bowden. All of these principals are veterans of musical comedy and revue and know their way around among any man's group of musical numbers. Eunice Healy, the stellar dancer of the troupe, and Virginia Bolen contribute pert performances, as Irene's two accomplices in her adventures in high society, and Helen Namur is an impressive social dowager.

Comedy is intrusted to Lida Kane, who is a tower of strength as Mrs. O'Hare; Eddie Michaels, an acrobatic dancing comedian, and the aforementioned Jerry Delaney, who is playing the role he created as the male modiste. They get their full quota of laughs. Leslie Adams, jr., and Violet Holliday complete an exceptionally capable roster of principals. The Capitol Rockets, of course, comprise an eminently proficient chorus and a male singing ensemble of the first rank lends fine body to the ensembles. The piece moves smoothly and is staged with the frisking "camera-shutter" settings that make alternation of Ninth avenue and Fifth easy and swift. Altogether, a nostalgic and engaging innovation on F street that met with high favor yesterday.

The Screen Feature

"Second Fiddle," the Capitol's screen feature, is aptly named. That is what it will play all week. The story, obviously suggested by the long search for an actress to play Scarlett, seems just a trifle trite and seems, furthermore, not to have inspired Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Sonja Henie and some of the lesser members of the cast to their best efforts. This cannot be said of Edna May Oliver or Alan Dinehart, both of whom give their roles everything they've got and more than once overshadow the stars.

That, needless to say, does not go for Miss Henie's skating. She has more than one opportunity during the action to demonstrate again that there is nobody else quite like her once she gets on those steel blades. Rudy Vallee and Mary Healy do well by Irving Berlin's songs, too. They are six in number and have a lilt to them that Berlin alone seems to know how to impart. But somehow the thing doesn't quite seem to jell into any very solid entertainment.

There is much in "Irene" and enough in "Second Fiddle" to provide an exorbitant money's worth, at any rate. In combination they provide a bill nobody will want to miss. The Fox Movietone News is the only auxiliary feature.

Care of Teeth

Hollywood, Calif.—When Fay Bainter, the mother in "A Family Affair," wants a high sparkle for her teeth, she mixes her tooth powder with bicarbonate of soda. For a refreshing mouthwash and mild bleach she mixes her own paste by combining a powder dentifrice with lemon juice.

Principals in Snarled Romance

TYRONE POWER, RUDY VALLEE, SONJA HENIE, the triumvirate of stars appearing in Twentieth Century-Fox's production of "Second Fiddle," currently occupying the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Edna May Oliver, Alan Dinehart, Mary Healy and Lyle Talbot also are conspicuously cast

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 28.

ADVICE: Maury Maverick, the Mayor of San Antonio, was in Washington last week and visited Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black, whom he refers to as "the only former Ku Kluxer I've ever forgiven." . . . He admires Black, and advised him to be less retiring . . . "Go out and see things and talk to people," Maverick told him. "Talk to the newspapermen. It'll be all right." . . . The Supreme Court Justice agreed and added: "Hell, man. Everybody in Alabama joined the Klan!"

RECOGNITION: Maverick this week went to the Stork Club, examined the menu and was surprised at the fact that chile con carne cost $1.25 . . . "Back home in San Antonio it costs 15 cents," he informed. "I'm going to order some here so that I can tell the folks back home that I paid $1.25 for chile con carne in New York." . . . The dish was set before him and Maverick tasted the first fork-full . . . "I know that chile," he announced, and called the headwaiter. "Isn't that chile from San Antonio?" . . . The can was offered as proof. It came from San Antonio.

FAME: Billy Hill, the song writer who wrote "The Last Round-up," went to Rome and there, at the Excelsior Bar, he met Pietro Mascagni, who composed "Cavalleria Rusticana" . . . Hill was proud of this meeting with the famed Italian composer and immediately sent a cable to his music publisher, Shapiro, Bernstein & Co., informing: "Am at Excelsior Bar with Mascagni, the composer." . . . "Tell him," was the perfunctory replying cable, "if he has anything good to send it to us—Shapiro, Bernstein & Co."

SOLUTION: George Raft dined at the Riviera Sunday night, met the Maharajah of Tripura there and discussed the European situation. Raft and Edward G. Robinson will sail for Europe . . . The Maharajah was asked, later, what he and Raft had talked about . . . "He said that 'Little Caesar' Robinson would take care of Mussolini, and he would take care of Hitler," the Maharajah revealed. "And when they'd come back, they'd make a movie called 'The Little Tough Guys in Europe.'"

CHANGE: Thyra Samter Winslow has been writing drama reviews for "Woman's Day," the magazine published by the A. & P. Stores, and which has a circulation of more than two million . . . A short time ago Thyra was notified by the publishers that the readers no longer are interested in the Broadway drama, and suggested that she change the type of column to one with more appeal . . . Thyra obliged. She no longer criticizes the drama. Her popular column now consists of criticisms—of cooking recipes.

SWANK: Tony Galento made a personal appearance recently at the Steel Pier in Atlantic City . . . Following that engagement the beer-bred Tony arranged with the directors of the Renault Wineries to sponsor their bubbling champagne.

CHATTER: Sophie Tucker will fly to Hollywood to appear in a movie for Universal . . . Harry Maule, who has been vice president at Doubleday, Doran for 28 years, will transfer to an editorial post at Random House . . . Maxine Sullivan has junked her swing version of "Loch Lomond" and will feature an old Chinese hymn . . . Dr. Seuss, whose cartoons made the Flit ads famous, will become a political cartoonist . . . Sid Luckman, the all-American who signed a contract to play in pro football, now is working at the Herald Tribune . . . Contrary to all reports and despite union difficulties, the Hot Mikado won't close. The largest sign in the world has just been ordered for it.

TRIUMPH: Miriam Hopkins has succeeded in obtaining the leading role in the movie adaptation of "All This and Heaven, Too," which Warner Bros. will produce . . . The coveted role originally had been assigned to Bette Davis. But Miss Hopkins was anxious to do it . . . She owns the rights to a story which the Warners want for Paul Muni. Miriam released those rights in return for the Bette Davis role she wanted.

ENTERPRISE: Last year a two-volume edition of "The Complete Greek Drama" was published . . . One of the co-editors on that job was Eugene O'Neill, jr., son of the Nobel Prize playwright . . . O'Neill liked the job, and has written his publishers, requesting that all of his plays be published in exactly the same way.

TRAGEDY: Bruno of Hollywood, the noted photographer, was taking pictures in front of the Park Central Hotel . . . Directly behind him a woman fell three stories, out of the Carnegie Plaza Hotel, into a fruit stand . . . "Bruno," the news cameraman asked him, "did you take a picture of the fall?" . . . "Oh, no," the photographer replied. "I'm a portrait photographer."

It Still Doesn't Pay in Film At Columbia

'Undercover Doctor' Points Another Attack At Criminality

"UNDERCOVER DOCTOR." Paramount picturization of a story from "Persons in Hiding," by J. Edgar Hoover, adapted to the screen by Horace McCoy and William R. Lipman, with Lloyd Nolan, J. Carrol Naish, Janice Logan, Broderick Crawford, Heather Angel, Robert Wilcox, Richard Carle, Stanley Price, John Eldridge, George Meeker, Raymond Hatton and Phillis Warren. Directed by Louis King. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Columbia Theater.

The ghost of Dillinger stalks through "Undercover Doctor," latest celluloid to be based on episodes in J. Edgar Hoover's "Persons in Hiding." The head hoodlum, played by Broderick Crawford, tries to have his features changed to avoid detection. Like Dillinger, he has a certain loyalty to his pals in crime. Like Dillinger, he can operate only because he has the undercover cooperation of certain "respectable citizens."

Easy money is the lure that drags a young doctor into cahoots with gangsters. After patching up one bandit, he tells the leader that he will have to report the case to the police, that the fee for the case will be given to the policemen's fund. When he gets back to his office, he actually picks up the telephone to call the law, but the roll of bills lying in front of him breaks down his resolution.

From here it's an easy step to an office in the big town. Here he shortly builds up a lucrative practice, with gangster cases as its back log. One night he has to choose between operating on a G-man and a gangster who have been shot in the same fracas. He chooses to save the G-man, tries to break off his association with crime. But he finds that it's easy to take hold, hard to let go of such a partnership. Also he's up to his neck in stock gambling, has to hold up the gang for extortionate prices to save his own financial hide.

New Light on Thugs

A smart point is scored in "Undercover Doctor" in showing the actual thugs as essentially less contemptible than their "respectable" associates. "Uncle Elmer" Porter, head of a big construction company used to mask his activities as a bloodsucking fence; the cocky and unscrupulous criminal lawyers; lastly, the "undercover doctor" who turns over one wounded criminal (from the wrong gang) just to make himself look good, while he takes fees from other criminals—all of these are pretty slimy citizens.

J. Carrol Naish makes an able job of his portrayal of the undercover doctor, who also ensnares the love of two pretty girls and finally succeeds only in double-crossing his patients, his business associates, the girls and himself. Richard Carle rates the acting honors of the picture as the oleaginous Uncle Elmer. Heather Angel and Janice Morgan both prove lovely to look at, but haven't much to do in a dramatic way.

A difficulty about "Undercover Doctor" is that its producers have sought conscientiously to deglamorize crime and also have been too honest to glamorize the G-men. The casting also seems to have been backed into a bit ungracefully. Thus Broderick Crawford, who did so nobly in "Of Mice and Men," just isn't adapted to the role of crime czar, though he would have made a fine G-man. And Lloyd Nolan, who can be plumb poisonous as a hoodlum, floundered about considerably in trying to do something with his clean-cut G-man part.

Thrilling Short Reel

The big thrill at the Columbia is "Sand Hogs," a splendid short subject and one that should blaze the way for others of its general type. It records the unsung dangers of the construction of the new Hudson River Tunnel, the courage and endurance of these unknown huskies, the "sand hogs," who drove the big tube under the river. There's also a film about baby animals and the news reel is glorified by the spectacle of "Two-Ton Tony" Galento boxing a kangaroo.

Miss Garson Tells Origin of Name

Greer Garson, who made her first filfn appearance opposite Robert Donat in "Goodbye, Mr. Chip," has explained her first name.

Numbered among the player's correspondence are letters from fans named Greer, who wonder if she isn't a relative. In every case Miss Garson replies in the negative. There are literally thousands of Greers in the north of Ireland where she was born, the name Greer being a contraction of McGregor, the famous Scottish clan. When some of the McGregors fled to the north of Ireland, they changed their name to Greer.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 22 (DS).—Wonder what happened to Leslie Howard's plan to film "Bonnie Prince Charlie?" I was curious because today I was told that Herbert Wilcox will go to Scotland in heather-time and make a picture in color, based on the romance of daring Flora MacDonald and Bonnie Prince Charlie. Anna Neagle, the British favorite who just completed "Nurse Edith Cavell," will play the courageous Flora, who kept the prince in hiding from his enemies with a price of 30,000 pounds on his unhappy head.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Do you remember your English history and the romantic story of the Scottish lass who was sent to the Tower of London for her devotion to the last of the Stuarts? You'll see it all in the movies, and, I imagine, this will be as pleasing to the English people as was Miss Neagle's biography of Queen Victoria.

Mervyn Leroy is stepping out of his job as executive producer and returning to his first love, directing. You can't call it a demotion, for he himself asked to be relieved of the headaches connected with telling others how to make pictures. He will direct three, "The Ziegfeld Girl," "Sea of Grass," with Spencer Tracy and Myrna Loy, and, most interesting of all, "National Velvet." This is Enid Bagnold's best-seller of four years ago, which was never filmed because of the difficulty of finding a satisfactory heroine to play Velvet. I am wondering now if it will be Judy Garland.

Bonita Granville grows up! It only yesterday that she won acclaim for her remarkable performance as the brat in "These Three." Now she is 17—old enough to wear a sophisticated hair-do and smart clothes. She's pretty, too, with her fluffy blonde hair, and one of the nicest kids in the whole town. So it isn't surprising that Warners have given her the ingenue role in "Edgar Allan Poe." Bonita has shot up so suddenly that I must admit it came as a shock to me when someone told me that a young millionaire, Dodo Sinclair, has been paying her attention and that she has a date with him for the opening of Benny Goodman at the Victor Hugo.

Elsa Maxwell herself squelched the campaign to launch her as "another Marie Dressler"—and in this, I think, she has helped her movie chances more than anything else she possibly could have done. Elsa was very good as just herself in "Hotel for Women," and certainly she did not remind anyone in the preview audience of the one and only Dressler. Too many careers are nipped because of attempted imitations. Remember Ricardo Cortez flopped miserably as a "second" Valentino and turned to directing? Madge Evans, in the beginning, was unfortunately hailed as a "young Norma Shearer," a title which did her more harm than good. Very smart of Warners, too, to lay off comparisons to Jean Harlow in Ann Sheridan's case. It's tough enough to get ahead with the competition on hand without newcomers having to battle beloved memories.

Snapshots of Hollywood at Random: The Donald Novises welcomed a daughter, Carol Jean, yesterday morning; Jean Acker, once married to Rudy Valentino, at the Troc after the ""Hotel for Women" preview with Marshall Duffield; Gregory Ratoff, the director, there with pretty Katherine Aldridge, who made her debut in Elsa Maxwell's movie; Howard Sturges hosted Cole Porter, the Jack Warners and Constance Collier, all of whom thought Elsa was surprisingly good in her first movie; Duke Daly leaves his bride, Paula Stone, to go on tour with his band. But they'll be reunited at Christmas when they go honeymooning.

Alfred Coates, British conductor, leads the California Junior Symphony at the reception honoring Lieut. Gov. Ellis Patterson tomorrow night. Alfred Newman is chairman and Melvin Douglas is the speaker of the evening; Mary Livingstone gave Gracie Allen her annual birthday party, with just a few friends to help celebrate; friends of Kate McCarthy will be sad to hear of her death in New York this morning. She was a great friend of Fanny Brice, Roger Davis and Norma Talmadge and often visited here; Marjorie Weaver and Walter Brooks III are the town's newest twosome; Hunt Stromberg's friends are so jealous they aren't speaking to him. He had $20 on the nose of Justa Bubble, which paid $121 for $2 at Hollywood Park.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Can't Forget Tarzan

Johnny Sheffield is keeping Busby Berkeley and the "Babes in Arms" company on pins and needles by swinging around the set on any rope he finds hanging loose. It's a trick he learned while playing Tarzan, jr.

Dozen Setting Hens Are Film Problem

Most difficult property-finding task on "The Wizard of Oz" was a seemingly easy assignment of locating twelve setting hens for the farmyard sequence. The scenes were made at the time of the year when hens do not ordinarily set. Workers had to search for a week to find a dozen hens setting out of season.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., July 28.—Went to Metro to see how my friend, Bill Powell, was standing up in "Another Thin Man." Van Dyke, speediest director in town, said "Bill's supposed to let me know when he gets tired. But he hasn't tired yet. The first day we shot 31 scenes."

HOPPER

At the end of the first week they're a day and a half ahead of schedule. While the callboard cancelled two other productions, Van Dyke called for four stages that day.

Bill looks swell. The old suave sleuth has forgotten none of his touches.

That pretty Muriel Hutchison who played the maid in "The Women" is finally working in "Another Thin Man." She signed for it in New York last December.

Myrna, I regret to say, was having the day off.

Patric Knowles, whose career was stymied because he looked so much like Errol Flynn, is getting his chance with Bill Powell.

Every writer tells me his mood has softened since marriage. I've never had any complaints about him.

I finally caught up with Artie Shaw on "The Dancing Co-Ed" set. Some of our ego-maniacs could take a modesty sheet out of his book. Artie was offered a job in Hollywood two years ago. Said: "No, I'll string along with my band. I know a little about music, nothing about acting. If

Irish Flee British in War On Terrorists

Heavy Exodus as 19 Are Expelled Under Drastic New Law

Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 28.—The British government obtained sweeping powers to break up the illegal Irish Republican army when the "prevention of violence act" received the royal assent this afternoon after a quick passage through both houses of Parliament, and within an hour police began to round up Irishmen suspected of terroristic activities.

The bill took 76 minutes to pass the House of Lords, 48 minutes more to go through the House of Commons. Then a group of 50 M. P.'s, headed by Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare, filed over to the bar over the upper house for the ceremonies of the royal assent. The lord chancellor, Lord Maugham, put a three-cornered hat on his great wig, and with scarlet and ermine robes billowing about him, sat in state before the gilded royal throne with his scarlet-clad colleagues and the royal commission, the Earl of Lucan and Lord Denman. Only four peers were on the red-covered benches.

A clerk declaimed the ancient formula, "Le Roy le veult," and in 12 minutes the ritual was over and the measure had become law.

Nineteen Expelled

Later this afternoon ten suspects caught in the police dragnet were taken to Marlborough street police station. A score of detectives carried out raids in the haunts of Irishmen in the Camdentown district in north London. Afterward Sir Samuel Hoare signed orders for the expulsion of eight men.

Tonight Sir Samuel Hoare signed 11 additional expulsion orders, making a total of 19 so far. All police leaves have been canceled, and the provincial police chiefs from Liverpool, Coventry, Birmingham, Manchester and other cities attended a conference at Scotland Yard, bringing dossiers of suspects in their districts.

Scores of Irishmen left England voluntarily tonight, rather than run the risk of being documented and photographed by the police. The overnight Irish Mail Express which runs from Euston Station to Holyhead, Wales, was run in three sections, so heavy were the reservations. On the platform in London men and women struggled to get near the cars to say farewells. Many women became hysterical in the crush.

It was reported, but without official confirmation, that Sean Russell, chief of staff of the I. R. A., and formerly director of munitions, had arrived secretly in London from the United States to direct a new campaign of violence. Scotland Yard was said to have received information from several "independent sources" that he had slipped into England.

Parliament Curtails Visiting

All visitors, including American tourists, have been barred until further notice from entering the Houses of Parliament, which the I. R. A. had singled out for attacks. Spectators were admitted today to the public galleries, as usual, although women had their handbags searched. The usual complimentary passes to inspect the Lords and Commons and other parts of the historic buildings will not be issued tomorrow.

Special guards were placed tonight near the royal palaces in London and at Westminster Cathedral.

I. R. A. members were believed responsible for cutting the wires of six telephone booths near Piccadilly Circus and Leicester Square today. At Birkenhead, Cheshire, opposite Liverpool, the attendant at a workmen's eating house reported that a woman handed him a parcel yesterday, saying, "This is Paddy Reagan's dinner."

Hearing a ticking sound, the attendant opened the package and found a bomb timed to explode at 12:30 p. m. He threw the package into the River Mersey. A diver will attempt to recover it tomorrow.

Three men arrested in connection with the fatal bombing on Wednesday at Kings Cross Station, London, were remanded for a week at Bow Street Police Court today.

With the air minister as passengers were Air Marshal Sir Christopher Courtnay, Air Vice Marshal W. Sholto-Douglas, assistant chief of the air staff, and Sir Edward Campbell, member of Parliament. They were badly shaken and suffered shock.

Sidney Franklin To Fly Bulls to Fair

Mexico City, July 28 (U.P.).—Sidney Franklin, Brooklyn's gift to bullfighting, today made plans to fly two bulls to the New York World's Fair in the greatest bovine aerial venture since the cow jumped over the moon.

The toreador said he would prove to World's Fair audiences that bullfighting can be a "humane" sport.

Policeman Who Killed By Accident Ends Life

New York, July 22.—Patrolman Louis Pensa, who was suspended and charged with technical homicide today after he had accidentally shot and killed a colored man while engaging in target practice, committed suicide by hanging at 8:15 o'clock tonight in the cell to which he was taken at Staten Island police headquarters.

Brazilian Chosen as Guest Conductor at Watergate

Burle Marx to Lead Symphony in Music Of His Country

A new Brazilian envoy will present his credentials to Washington at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the Watergate.

He is Burle Marx, rated as the outstanding symphonic conductor of South America, who will lead the National Symphony Orchestra in the sixth sunset concert of the season.

Marx, named by the Brazilian government as its commissioner of music for both the New York and San Francisco World's Fairs, is here to promote a musical extension of the good neighbor policy.

"Music is the international language," he said yesterday. "It makes friendships faster than political missions. But in the new atmosphere of political co-operation in the Americas, I think musical interchange is going to be easier.

Marx was guest conductor for two sunset symphonies in 1935. "Four years ago," he recalls with a wealth of Latin gesture, "you felt an obstacle when you tried to interest people here in South American music. Now the European situation is so stirred up, the United States is taking much more interest in everything about Latin America."

A prominent place on tomorrow night's program has been given to the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos, close frend of Marx. The conductor would rather talk about the composer, whom he considers "the greatest now working in the Americas," than himself.

Villa-Lobos, he related, was appointed director of musical education in Rio de Janeiro eight years ago. "The government ruled by decree at that time," Marx said, "so when Villa-Lobos invented a new system of teaching children to sing, all the teachers had to come and learn it from him."

in the schools, the conductor sees a great growth in the Brazilian audience for good music, which has not spread so rapidly as the American because of the comparative scarcity of radios.

Besides two excerpts from Villa-Lobos' "Bachiana Brasileira," tomorrow night's program includes the "Overture to Il Guarony," by Gomez, another Brazilian; Cesar Franck's Symphony in D, "Il Moldau," by Smetana and the "Blue Danube."

Marx has been conductor of the Rio de Janeiro Philharmonic Orchestra since 1930.

Britain May Abrogate Pact

tions in the Tientsin dispute meanwhile were adjourned until Monday after a three-hour session in which little progress was reported.

Washington's move of Wednesday inspired an angry editorial in the newspaper Kokumin, organ of the army and ultra-nationalistic elements, which declared "opinion is rising in favor of abrogation of the Nine-Power Treaty without further ado."

"In that case," the newspaper said, "the United States should be prepared to face a situation in which her rights and interests in China can no longer be tenable."

Why So Abruptly?

Among the questions being asked about Washington's move were why the action came so abruptly and why at the time of the British-Japanese talks.

Many stocks still were down from a fraction of a yen (27 cents) to 3 yen, particularly spinning mill and steamship securities.

Economic and policing problems were before the British-Japanese conference when it adjourned.

An authoritative source said the two main points to be taken up Monday would be Japan's demands that Britain co-operate in suppression of Chinese government currency in North China and that silver stocks belonging to the Chinese government held in banks in the blockaded British concession in Tientsin be turned over to the Japanese-dominated Peiping regime.

Nazis Sign Trade Pact

Berlin, July 28 (U.P.).—Germany and Japan today initialed an accord providing for a substantial increase in trade between the two powers and Nazis represented the agreement as a counterblow to Washington's denunciation of the Japanese-American commercial treaty.

The Berlin-Tokyo pact, it was explained, will permit an extensive trade increase with the assistance of German credits and will bring new collaboration "in the framework of the existing friendship of the two countries."

Information was distributed to the foreign press saying:

"It is pointed out that the time chosen for initialing (the pact) . . . occurs at the moment when the United States had unexpectedly denounced its trade agreement with Japan and when Anglo-Japanese negotiations regarding China are in progress."

Political quarters took this statement as an admission that the pact is designed not only to counter the economic and political blow dealt to the Japanese government by the United States but also to impress Great Britain and the world generally with the unity of the anti-Comintern pact signatories at a critical time in the Anglo-Japanese talks.

Annapolis Cuts Taxes for First Time in 25 Years

Annapolis, Md., July 28 (A.P.).—Mayor George Haley announced tonight the city council, for the first time in 25 years, had reduced the municipal tax rate below its statutory maximu mof $1 on each $100 assessed valuation.

Mayor Haley, less than a year in office, said an overhaul of the municipal government inaugurated four mnoths ago had increased income and reduced expenses to make the rate reduction possible.

The 1940 budget adopted by the council was $193,042, up $20,500 from last year. Haley said increase in nontax revenues would permit added expenditure for street and municipal works while reducing the tax rate.

"In my judgement the community is faced with an organized effort to eliminate all former gangster associates of Lepke and Gurrah. While Gurrah surrendered last year to serve his Federal sentence, it is believed that he did so in order to avoid being murdered by his own partner, Lepke.

Lepke, a swarthy, big-nosed gangster with dead black eyes, is presumably alone in his hiding place. His former partner, Shapiro, now is serving a two-year Federal sentence for violating the anti-trust laws.

Orlovsky was called in this afternoon to Foley's office in the Bronx for questioning. Dewey described him as "one of the toughest men in New York," and remarked that if he "would talk the underworld would be cracked wide open."

Hitler, Ribbentrop Meet, Reportedly On Russian Trade

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, July 28.—Chancellor Hitler returned unexpectedly to Berlin today for a conference with Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop. Among industrialists it is believed that German trade relations with the Soviet Union was the chief reason for the Fuehrer's change of plans.

Reports of an imminent commercial treaty between Germany and the Soviet Union have flourished here in recent weeks. They have been based for the most part on the almost complete disappearance from the German press of its earlier attacks on Russia as "World Public Enemy No. 1," and on the formidable difficulties which are apparently still blocking the English and French negotiators in Moscow.

If her husband, Minor C. R. Keith, of Briston, Md., attempts to obtain a larger interest, the will provides that his legacy be revoked.

Ex-Bank Teller Admits $1,000 Embezzlement

Brnard P. Way, former savings teller of the Second National Bank, yesterday abandoned his defense against charges that he embezzled $1,016 and pleaded guilty before Justice Morris. The case was referred to the probation office at the request of Attorney Myer Koonm, who said Way had no criminal record.

Way was returned here from San Francisco, where he was about to sail to the Far East to serve in the Army.

Allied Fleets Test Plan to Starve Italy

French, British Ships Mass at Malta for Mediterranean Blockade

By the United Press.

London, July 28.—British and French warships massed off Malta in the central Mediterranean today for maneuvers resembling a "shadow war" with Italy's fleet, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of Austria's march on Serbia which launched the World War.

In London the anniversary was observed in grim manner stressing preparations for the next war as military authorities raised a balloon barrage ringing the city with a spiderweb of steel cables intended to trap any raiding enemy planes.

At 10 a. m. scores of gray gas bags, forming the barrage, rose over parks, streets and squares to encircle the metropolis at a radius of 7 miles from Tower Bridge on the Thames.

Britain's army will reach its greatest strength in peace-time history tomorrow when 55,000 men of the Territorials (corresponding to the U. S. National Guard) report at training camps to join 80,000 already under arms. They will start summer maneuvers Tuesday.

In the midst of extensive defense preparations at home, on the continent and in the Mediterranean, Viscount Gort, chief of the imperial general staff, told Royal Afr Force cadets at Cranwell that they must "never forget that our empire was won by the sword and it has been preserved through generations by the sword."

"As a last resort in the future," he added, "it can only be safeguarded by the sword."

King George VI today gave royal assent to the Parliamentary bill of the overseas trade department empowering the government to grant credits up to $300,000,000 to friendly nations and allies in the European "peace front" pledged to resist further totalitarian aggression.

Poland already has been promised $40,000,000 in credits under the bill to purchase war materials and equipment.

Naval experts watched closely the massing of the British and French warships off Malta, coinciding with maneuvers nearby of the Italian fleet.

Objective of the Italian warships, representing the European totalitarian bloc and concentrated between Sicily and Libya, is to cut the British and French life lines especially at Gibraltar and to grab all available raw materials on both sides of the Mediterranean.

Daladier Wins 2 Years More Of Authority

Present Parliament Prolonged, Extending His Decree Powers

By the Associated Press

Paris, July 28.—The French cabinet tonight approved the terms of a decree prolonging the life of the present Parliament for two more years. The decree is to be signed by President Lebrun in full cabinet meeting tomorrow.

Ordinarily a parliamentary election would have been due next year. Premier Daladier was reported to have told colleagues that he would publish the decree only if the international situation became more serious.

The decree, in effect, would prolong the premier's dictatorial powers to rule France for another two years, as he has large "working majorities" in both chambers of Parliament. His cabinet decree powers end November 30.

Another decree approved today takes direction of state radio stations from the minister of posts, telegraphs and telephones and places it directly under Daladier's office. It has long been reported the premier planned to create an office, reporting directly to him, to deal with the press and radio.

Japanese Envoys Snub U. S. Attache

Moscow, July 28 (INS).—Five military and air attaches of the Japanese embassy in Moscow tonight declined an invitation to attend a reception at the country house of American Military Attache Haine. They gave "other engagements" as their reason.

It was not known whether their absence from the function was intended as a demonstration of protest over abrogation by the United States of the American-Japanese trade treaty. Their refusal of the invitation, however, created a considerable stir in Moscow's foreign diplomatic colony.

MORE INTERNATIONAL EXPERTS PICK GUNTHER'S OVER EUROPEAN BEERS!

MY HAT'S OFF TO MARYLAND. YOUR GUNTHER'S IS AS DRY AND BEER-Y AS EUROPE'S BEST!

We'd like to have you meet more of these experts. Each is an expert on beers made here and abroad. James Wright is on the left, formerly of Hotel Savoy, London, now in New York. Max Wex on the right, is a member of the I. B. A., with Headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland

AT LAST you can get it! The beer taste which has maintained the world-wide reputation of European beers for so many years. And it doesn't cost you a penny more than regular beer to enjoy it. Gunther's is as light as European beers . . . but unlike so many U. S. A. made beers it isn't "sweet."

Experts Amazed

Europe never believed America could make a beer equal to an old world glass of beer. But today it's a fact. Here's what Mr. Fred Hercher, formerly of Baden-Baden, says: "America can well be proud of that Maryland beer called Gunther's. In my judgment no costlier European beer is any better." Mr. Werner Breloh says: "You've got a great beer down there in Maryland . . . that Gunther's equals the best European brews!" And so it goes, as one International expert after another tells you that the U. S. A. is beating Europe at her own game.

Your Lucky Day

Try Gunther's. And as you smack your lips over its dry, clean, beer-y taste you can know, that in the opinion of International experts . . . you couldn't get a better glass of beer in Holland, Denmark or any of the other famous European countries. Order some Gunther's . . . it's great beer. Gunther Brewing Co., Baltimore, Md.

For rich, hearty, full-bodied ALE . . . look for Gunther's in the beautiful green bottle.

The Exhibitionist

It is difficult to believe that John L. Lewis is really quite as silly as his outburst of childish malevolence against the Vice President would indicate.

In many ways the head of C. I. O. has shown himself possessed of mature intelligence. It is not merely a loud voice and a blustering personality which has carried this labor leader to the position of prestige and popularity which he occupies, or at least did occupy until this week. Mr. Lewis also has brains, and there is usually an understandable and rational motive behind the gyrations, gesticulations and genuflexions in which he indulges to attract the public eye.

But it is extraordinarily difficult to detect any ratiocination in his fantastic characterization of the Vice President as "a labor-baiting, poker-playing, whisky-drinking, evil old man whose name is Garner." The most plausible explanation, judging by the immediate reaction to this fishwife oratory, is that Mr. Lewis really seeks, for reasons best known to himself, to forward Mr. Garner's claim on the gratitude of the electorate. Admittedly, however, this is a trifle far-fetched.

So one is thrown back toward the conclusion that Mr. Lewis, paragon of virtue and assiduous ascetic though he may be, has this time stepped heavily on a banana peel and is in for the consequences customarily consequent thereon. In doing so he has certainly achieved publicity, for which his yen is unmistakable. But there are various sorts of publicity and the present instance savors of the halitosis variety.

On the other hand it must be admitted that Mr. Lewis has relieved the dog days with a diversion stimulating even to jaded Washington. Viewed solely as a piece of buffoonery his clowning act before the House Labor Committee was highly entertaining. It will probably be remembered, and given a footnote in the history books, long after other achievements of the C. I. O. chairman are forgotten. Perhaps, in the last analysis, this essay in diatribe deserved the appreciative chuckle with which Cactus Jack received it.

Assignment In Manila

The post of American High Commissioner to the Philippines is an important assignment in spite of the fact that the islands are now largely self-governing. While the official duties of the post are not onerous, the type of service which the High Commissioner is expected to render calls for a diplomat and statesman of tested ability. So the shift of Francis B. Sayre from his place as Assistant Secretary of State to the high commissionership is entirely logical.

As chairman of the Interdepartmental Committee on Philippine Affairs, Mr. Sayre gained an intimate acquaintance with the island's problems as well as the full confidence of officials at Manila. Instead of using the post to aid an aspiring politician, as it has often been used in the past, the President has selected a man who is particularly competent to direct American-Philippine relations in a period of far-reaching transitions. That fact suggests increasing concern over the position of this country in the Far East.

While the Philippine Commonwealth set up in 1935 appears to be functioning satisfactorily, there are many indications that the islanders are not enthusiastic over the prospect of a complete separation from this country, as the independence act now contemplates. Perhaps some formula may be devised to perpetuate, for both countries, most of the advantages of their close association since the Spanish-American War. Such an arrangement is being earnestly sought by many sincere Filipinos and Americans.

It may be that Mr. Sayre will play an important part in this movement. At any rate, he has the complete confidence and good will of the officials at Manila and will be in a position to discuss the future relationships between the two countries to good advantage.

No doubt the nomination of Mr. Sayre is also related, in some measure, to the abrogation by the United States of its commercial treaty with Japan. The American position in the Far East is unavoidably influenced by its relation to the Philippines. When a high official of the Department of State becomes our representative at Manila, there is at least a suggestion that the Administration wishes to strengthen our influence in affairs on the other side of the Pacific.

From each of these viewpoints, the nomination of Mr. Sayre to the high commissionership seems to be a particularly happy selection.

No Veto In Sight

It is reassuring to hear from President Roosevelt that he favors the objectives of the Hatch bill and that the measure is not being considered from the political viewpoint. There had been some fear that the President's delay in signing the measure might indicate that a veto will be forthcoming. But if the President is merely studying the measure as it would affect the Government service and the welfare of the country in general a veto seems to be out of the question.

President Roosevelt's executive order placing under civil service all Government employes not specifically exempted by law accomplished in part the chief objective of the Hatch bill. It removed a large number of public servants from the realm of active politics. That move was widely acclaimed by the public for precisely the same reason that the Hatch bill has been given such enthusiastic support.

In his press-conference discussion of the Hatch bill Mr. Roosevelt left the impression that he is sympathetic with Representative Ramspeck's efforts to deal a final blow to the spoils system. The most effective move he can make to attain that end is to sign the Hatch bill. The close relationship between these two movements is pointedly emphasized in a telegram from the National Civil Service Reform League urging the President to sign the bill. "Hatch bill urgently needed," the league wrote, "to keep our civil service from becoming unduly embroiled in political campaigns all over the country, and to maintain public confidence in a nonpartisan, impartial public service."

It is true that President Roosevelt is not entirely satisfied with the bill in its present form. He complains particularly of its vague language. Would it permit Federal employes to attend political meetings? Could a United States marshal sit on the platform at a rally for his best friend who happened to be running for office? Could a voluntary contribution be made by a Government clerk to a political cause? These are important questions, but the President should have known the answers. For they are contained in the civil service regulations which Mr. Roosevelt himself issued a year ago to govern the political activities of civil service employes.

Under these rules a classified employe may make voluntary political contributions, provided they are not made to any other Federal employe in violation of the corrupt practices act. Federal workers may be members of political clubs, providing they are not active as officers or committee members. They may attend political meetings so long as they do not become active participants.

The chief purpose of the Hatch bill is to extend these sensible rules promulgated by Mr. Roosevelt, and by other Presidents before him, to all employes in the executive branch, except policy-making officials. Indeed, the Hatch bill uses the very language of the civil service rules, with the exception of one immaterial word. In neither case is every conceivable violation mentioned. But there has been no special difficulty in applying the President's orders to the classified service, and there should be none in extending the same regulations to all Government employes.

When the President examines the bill in detail he will doubtless recall the rules he promulgated for the classified service. Surely that should relieve his mind of any possible fear that the terms of this vital reform measure are too vague to be given his approval. And even if the President does find some parts of the bill that could be improved, the reasonable course would be for him to sign it and ask Congress that it be amended later. Taken as a whole the measure is so obviously sound and constructive that a veto based on relatively minor objections would be a real calamity.

The New FCC Member

James L. Fly, nominated by President Roosevelt to succeed Frank R. McNinch as a member of the Federal Communications Commission, belongs to that comparatively small group of "career" men in the Government service who owe their advancement primarily to their energy and ability.

Entering Government service in 1929 as a special assistant to the Attorney General in charge of anti-trust cases, he served a laborious apprenticeship as counsel for the Government. His competent handling of the Sugar Institute case in 1932 first brought the name of the youthful lawyer, then 34 years of age, to public attention.

In 1934, Mr. Fly became general solicitor and later general counsel of the TVA. As head of the legal staff, he successfully defended the validity of the TVA program in two major test cases carried to the Supreme Court.

While his past activities have not brought the new member of the FCC into direct touch with the special problems of radio and air communication, they have given him an insight into the effect of regulatory legislation upon private industry and public utilities. If Mr. Fly should be made chairman of the FCC, as expected, his position will carry with it exceptional opportunities for usefulness in helping to mold the regulatory policies of the Government in a comparatively new and tremendously important field. His past record indicates that he will devote himself whole-heartedly to the task.

Undemocratic Practice

It is difficult for a legislative body as large as the House to follow democratic law-making processes. It must of necessity rely upon committees to sift, select and recommend measures for its consideration. If those committees use their privileged position to impose their will upon the Legislature, instead of trying to ascertain and give effect to its wishes, the democratic method of law-making tends to degenerate into minority dictation.

The Rules Committee has of late been acting contrary to the democratic method of procedure in trying to influence the course of legislation instead of expediting lawmaking by voting to call up bills on which the House is ready and eager to take action. It delayed consideration of the Administration's housing bill because a number of Democrats on the committee opposed to that measure joined hands with a Republican minority to prevent its being reported out. The fact that the housing bill has at last been released does not excuse such obstructionist tactics.

The attitude of certain members of the committee toward the Barden amendments to the wage-hour law is likewise indefensible. The fact that these amendments are opposed by the Administration is irrelevant. The merits of the Barden bill are likewise not at issue. The circumstance that exposes the committee to deserved criticism is that a group of Democrats headed by Representative Cox and supported by certain Republican members attempted to force consideration of the Barden bill in disregard of customary procedure. As the bill in question had never been before the Labor Committee, such action was properly denounced by Chairman Norton as "unprecedented." The fact that Chairman Sabath of the Rules Committee blocked efforts of his colleagues to report out the Barden bill added to the general confusion.

Finally, the situation resulted in the calling of an extraordinary session of the House Labor Committee. Incidentally, that afforded John L. Lewis an opportunity to be present at Labor Committee hearings and to denounce in unmeasured terms Vice President Garner and all those members of Congress who advocate amendments to the wage-hour law. After all these tempestuous preliminaries, the Rules Committee has finally decided to send three revisionist proposals to the floor of the House, including the Barden bill. As President Roosevelt points out, there is a greater possibility of action with all kinds of legislation on the floor than there is if all legislative proposals remain in committee.

For all these untoward developments the primary blame rests upon the Rules Committee. If it had devoted itself to its assigned task of bringing really important bills before Congress without permitting personal likes and dislikes to influence its selection, the legislative snarl that has held up the House program would not have developed.

Exploration

The attempt to achieve the impossible, in face of scientific demonstration to the contrary, has always been a favorite American occupation.

In the current issue of Scripta Mathematica, Prof. William L. Schaaf, of Brooklyn College, cites ten mathematical "solutions" advanced by pseudo-scientists and published for the most part at their own expense. Prof. David Eugene Smith, of Columbia, reports receipt of such "solutions" at the rate of about one a month.

Prof. Schaaf notes the perennial appearance of those who claim ability to solve the old familiar insolvables (perpetual motion, duplication of the cube, trisecting the angle, etc.). But he further discloses such interesting efforts as the publication, in 1934, of a book of 278 pages entitled "The Circle Squared Beyond Refutation," which went into a second edition. These unacknowledged wonder workers presume to pass judgment as well on such "satanic" systems as non-Euclidian geometry and Darwinian evolution.

But laugh as one will at these ambitious and perhaps misdirected attempts, it would be a mistake to laugh them out of existence. They indicate a hardy, inquiring, never-say-die intelligence, which it is always well to foster, no matter to what strange or barren coastlands we are led thereby.

The average life-span of man is far too short a period in which to learn how to play golf.

Another vicious circle is established when a woman worries about finding a few gray hairs in her head.

Seeks Co-operation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the Gallup Poll showing that a majority of the American people favor the President's policy on neutrality one may justly ponder as to whether some of our great legal minds in Congress are not a little too faint-visioned and too far behind the American public's broad sentiment on how to actually preserve America and at the same time world peace. In fact it seems that if we had a Congress composed of a good many average folks instead of so many professionals, as at present, the President would get better teamwork and find himself less thwarted in his progressive efforts.

It is about time Congress woke up to the fact that our welfare is bound up with the welfare of other peace-loving nations, and unless we co-operate with those nations to help stop aggressors we are not only morally responsible for the ills and sufferings caused to mankind by our cold-hearted indifference, but also we will actually have to carry the burden of providing for refugees and suffer all other consequences of economic and general chaos brought on by the short-sighted policy of some of our own people.

Maybe He Likes The Ocean

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of Postmaster General Farley's departure for Europe—upon what particular business the public is not informed—many are asking what special business ocassioned Farley's going to Hyde Park prior to his departure. Confabs between politicians sometimes are matters of conjecture whatever the nature of the matters discussed, and it behooves the public to watch carefully in times like these.

It is possible that something else than discussion of a third term may have brought Farley to Hyde Park. At any rate, the question uppermost in the minds of some now is, "What is Mr. Farley's purpose in visiting Europe at this time?"

The Alien Bills

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Certain letters that have appeared in The Post and other papers condemn the Dempsey, Hobbs, Smith, Reynolds and other American bills.

May I just say that the enactment of every one of the so-called "60 anti-alien" bills would do more to preserve and perpetuate our civil, religious, political and constitutional liberties than any or all else that can now be done. The opposition to them comes from those who believe with Lenin "We must build communism with non-communist hands"—that is, with dupes, the misguided, misled and hoodwinked.

Take the evidence presented at the hearing held on April 12 and 13 by the House Committee on the Judiciary, on one of these bills, H. R. 5138. That evidence, now printed, shows that the leading organization that opposed it and that is back of similar organized fronts, does not live up to its name, patriotic professions or alleged purposes, and advocates "civil liberties" only "as tools to bring about communism" and to destroy our form of government and our American civil liberties. The printed hearing is Serial No. 3 of the House Judiciary Committee, 1939. P. H. J.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I write to express my appreciation of the notice in the columns of The Post you gave on the death of Rudolphe De Zapp. Mr. De Zapp has been outstanding in educational and literary circles many years, and was greatly beloved by his language pupils. It was fitting that you gave the fine write up on his attainments. His old admirers and friends thank you. E. T. STEEL.

"We Must Fear Evil"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Incomparably worse than the sight of war's worst horrors is the sight of the soul of a man, or of a nation, going the easy way of decay and destruction. As Theodore Roosevelt once said, we must fear evil—that ugliest of all things—far more than we fear any kind of war.

A strong desire to do the right thing by all men and nations—a hunger for righteousness—is clearly far more promising of a united and peaceful humanity than is any desire, however overwhelming, to find temporary peace for ourselves by detaching our thoughts from the rest of the world. Every philosophy agrees that all evil can be summed up as "isolation"—the state of being cut off from God's purposes.

In the endless struggle, in the soul of every man and nation, between narrow selfishness with its enormous pressure, and righteousness (participation in God's plan), let us not be surprised that the arguments which are most sound make the least sound. Let us think of this whenever we ponder our past failure to join our immense weight and strength to the League of Nations, and our recent failure to support democracy in Spain, and our present failure to assist China rather than her anti-democratic foe.

And let us forever remember that not one among the anti-democratic nations, at least, is isolated! All of these do believe in isolation—but for democracies only!

Unconstitutional?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "The pot should not call the kettle black." Some of us people in America criticize others for things they do and then we do the same thing ourselves.

A few days ago a small group of people were advertising Bible lectures, to be given in Franklin Park and at their regular meeting place, by walking with signs and giving out circulars. They call themselves Jehovah's Witnesses. Although I am not a member of the organization, I have many friends amongst them. The police arrested these people saying they were parading without a permit.

The Constitution of the United States says a man has a right to serve his God according to the dictates of his own conscience and that is what these people were doing. In the twenty-eighth chapter of Matthew, verses 18, 19 and 20, Jesus told his disciples to go and preach the gospel and he did not tell them to ask any man's permission to do so. Let us all live up to the Constitution of the United States and not be followers of Hitler. OSCAR H. POTEET.

Christian Precept, Practice

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reference to my recent letter on the subject of "Compassion" which The Post published on July 16, and which has drawn several letters in reaction, may I ask the use of your columns for a concluding observation?

"Compassion" was the keynote of the Man of Galilee, who knew loneliness and isolation as no soul before or since. Let your readers be refreshed from Matthew 8:20:

"And Jesus saith unto him, the foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head."

The Golden Rule makes the sublime point that injustice to one group can never be excused by citing injustices suffered by other groups.

The Nazarene summed up the whole matter when He further taught that "Faith without works is dead" and "By their fruits ye shall know them."

He, crowned his greatness when, from the cross, He prayed, "Forgive them, Father, for they know not what they do."

So this writer feels about the unwitting cruelty of the world in the calamity of the refugees.

Sees Politics In The Hatch Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few pointers about the Hatch bill:

1. The bill states that it is "an act to prevent pernicious political activities." Most of the sections which define pernicious political activities and lay down the punishments therefor exempt members of Congress. Some provisions exempt also the President, Vice President, members of the Cabinet and certain Senate-confirmed officers. It is obvious that the purpose of the act is not to prevent pernicious political activities, but to concentrate them in a few hands, notably members of Congress.

2. Under section 9 executive employes are forbidden to take an active part in any election or in any political campaign. This includes activity in State and local elections. Our States rights Republicans never tire of stressing our dual form of government and denouncing the attempts of the Federal Government to interfere with State government and State sovereignty.

If a corporation said that none of its employes had the right to take an active part in State and municipal elections, under penalty of losing their employment, it would be regarded as a manifest infringement on State sovereignty. Is the Federal Government, as an employer of citizens of 48 States, in any different light in its attempt to dictate their behavior in State and local elections?

3. The same section 9, while forbidding political activity in any election, graciously reserves for Government employes "the right to vote as they choose and to express their opinions on all political subjects." The bill, as it originally passed the Senate, provided that Government employes could only "express privately their opinions on all political subjects." Evidently for fear that this might be regarded as an infringement on the Bill of Rights the word "privately" was later excluded.

It follows, then, that in accordance with the Constitution, Government employes are free to shout their opinions from the house tops on all political subjects. But these employes, while constitutionally expressing their political opinions, must see to it that their opinions do not "affect the result" of an election—otherwise they may be charged with the crime of using their "official authority or influence" to affect an election. If their opinions are effective in influencing the result of a Federal election or nomination they will be dismissed.

4. Section 2 makes it a crime for Federal employes to be active, not only in a Federal election campaign, but also in a nomination campaign. The inclusion of nominations (or primaries) was put in at the last minute, according to newspaper comment, in order to clinch the Garner campaign against the New Deal. The Congressional Record of April 13 indicates that the original Hatch bill, as it was unanimously agreed to by the Senate Elections Committee, omitted primaries because of "certain constitutional considerations and opinions as to the power of Congress."

After listening to Senator Hatch's explanation on this point, the Senate unanimously voted for the Hatch bill in its original form, that is to say, without reference to primaries or nominations. No new constitutional facts were brought up in the House or Senate debate on the amendment to include primaries or nominations. But why worry about constitutional scruples in a campaign to put the New Deal in a hole?

The President, who has announced himself in favor of the principle of the Hatch bill, but opposed to the loose form in which it was originally drafted, should veto the bill on the ground that it represents that very kind of pernicious political activity which the principle of the bill is designed to prevent.

Another Smile Threat

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE have cause to become apprehensive that we are on the eve of another era of stereotyped grin. The owners of these occasional and pervasive grins are usually aware of their danger, themselves.

When Douglas Fairbanks was at the height of his grin fame—when a picture without Douglas running up the walls of a room, holding onto the flowers in the wallpaper, wasn't considered a real movie—we knew him by that brilliant, dentifrice-advertising grin—one needed smoked glasses to look at it. Doug, if you would be curious to know, hated that grin as the devil is supposed to be allergic to holy water. A friend of mine traveling with the actor-acrobat through Michigan, during a liberty-bond-selling campaign, reported that between towns Doug was in the habit of letting his face rest. And when the train began to slow down, he would say, "Well, we're stopping again and I've got to put on that damn grin!"

We have not been troubled a great deal by Presidential grins; but some. The whole country remembers how Teddy would show his several hundred teeth on any and all occasions. He showed them in mirth and he showed them in anger. That was a toothsome Administration for sure. McKinley—predecessor of the reign of the grin—had a very grave and cautious smile, withal a gentle and admirable one. Taft had a broad, fat smile and quivered with a seismic chuckle that grew famous. Wilson had a slow, sweet smile, albeit a bit Calvinistic. Harding smiled sweetly and gravely—no hilarity in his smile. Coolidge smiled acidly—Alice Longworth, you know, said he "looked as if he had been weaned on a pickle."

Hoover didn't waste any smiles, and when he did smile his face unfortunately gave one the impression that he had just eaten a green persimmon. And while Mr. Roosevelt's smile has been an almost constant flash, not "a flash in the pan" (we wouldn't be guilty of a cheap pun like that!)—it has not been talked about very much. Nobody has said that he was weary of that smile, though such is no doubt the case with many movie addicts. But the President has escaped an embarrassing lot of publicity in print that he might have had if somebody had been mean enough to go after the grin. He has had a friendly press, as to his looks. This is eminently fair, since a man does not build his own face, and any face is better smiling than sourpussing.

But now, since Paul McNutt has come along, we are almost to the breaking point. I am certain as you are that Paul didn't make this handsome dial of his. He is just its victim, its patsy. He has no intention of being overwhelmingly, smotheringly, breath-takingly beautiful. He is fated with it. That's his face and he's stuck with it. He could not, and be decent, keep his teeth otherwise than the dazzling white they are?

And when Paul—"tall, tanned and terrific," as an inspired sob-sister blurbed when he returned from the Philippines some months before this visitation—turns on that flashing grin in that orientally-tanned countenance, the ensemble of strong features, raven eyebrows and snowy hair is irresistible. It's what it takes to make a cruelly handsome—almost (when it is handled carefully) a fatally handsome—man.

And what I am staggering and groping around toward saying—with the hope of no offense at all—is that if we are scheduled, through the hands of the fates and the new job, to go through four years or so of this manly super-beauty, with periodical visitations of the overwhelming smile——

This may be somewhat (through unsuspected complexes) the jealous ravings of an ugly guy about beautiful guys. But every homely man inherently suspects every handsome man. The lacker of pulchritude suspects the lacquer of beauty. And it is my strong, weighted opinion that when a big, manly, able, intelligent man with decided executive ability—such as Paul McNutt is and has—is handicapped with enough beauty for a he-harem, he ought to follow the old Turkish harem custom and wear a veil. It is not fair to him to let him tote a perfectly beautiful face around among such mugs as some—yea, most—of the rest of us are saddled with. It gets a good man pretty thoroughly misunderstood and falsely estimated.

Another phase of it (and this, too, I believe can't be helped; I'm just squalling around and bellyaching) that seems unfair, is that there are scads and scads of women going around wearing pans that would stop a snake race down hill, who could do nicely with a third of such wasted-on-a-mere-man beauty. Not only do they need it in their business of being women and living up to the title "the fair sex," but these wearers of male and misplaced glamour would gladly part with it, if there were only some way it could be wangled.

And let me add a word in the interests of justice: handsome men should be regarded by ugly (normal) men, more in sorrow than in anger. It may be that men as attractive facially as President Roosevelt, Paul McNutt and Robert Taylor are as nice and homely at heart as Edna Oliver and I.

STRICKLAND GILLILAN.

Conflagration

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can't our isolationists see that as we are not inhabiting some other planet, but living on this one, it is utterly impossible to avoid helping either the aggressors or their opponents? On one hemisphere we have greatly helped Japan, though our sympathies are with China. On this side of the world we are bound to help one side or the other, no matter how we legislate.

Suppose a conflagration were raging in Alexandria, with the fire companies trying to keep it from spreading, while a strong band of criminals is opposed to them. If we in Washington stand aloof, we help the criminals. If we send fire-fighting equipment, we help the firemen. So let us follow Mr. Hull's advice.

Fair Enough

Politicians Squawk

THE FACT, if it is a fact, that the Hatch Bill invades the politician's guarantee of free speech is a strange objection coming from members of the New Deal political organization. Men of that political faith have been loud supporters of an almost identical restriction of the private employer's right of free speech under the administration of the Labor Relations Board, and protests of the same kind that New Deal politicians now offer against the Hatch Bill have been dismissed with contemptuous snorts. The fact that the private employer's right of free speech is curtailed under the labor administration is not seriously denied. On the contrary, it is admitted and justified on the ground that mere discussion of the wisdom or justice of some union policy with an individual employe would amount to coercion and intimidation on the part of the boss.

It has been contended that the employer should have the right to argue matters with individuals as his only means of protecting himself and them from false representations and malicious propaganda disseminated by union representatives who may be unscrupulous politicians manipulating union strength to develop their personal power or to extort money from the employer by strike threats.

'All Right' For U. S. To Coerce Employes

BUT THE ATTITUDE of the New Deal and of all the radical journalistic claque which supports the Administration has been that employers are the natural enemies of not only the workers but of the country itself, and that a little trimming of their constitutional rights here and there is just what this country needs.

But now that a law is proposed to protect Government employes, including relief workers, from coercion and intimidation by their bosses, an awareness of this constitutional problem suddenly awakens in the circle of those who scoffed it away in the other case.

It is vicious of a private employer to converse on union matters with members of the staff or to send them circulars by mail criticizing union policies and methods, but it was all right for a mass employer in the Government to exhort workers on relief to keep their friends, meaning him and his party, in power. It was all right for the boss, meaning the New Deal's candidates, to coerce and intimidate the employes in a public election and to threaten them with loss of their jobs; indeed, even to fire some from their jobs for refusing to accept dictation at the ballot box. That was different, it seems.

Political Superiors Viewed With Cynicism

NOW IT MAY BE TRUE that the Hatch Bill would infringe the right of high-minded public servants and statesmen to communicate their views to public employes in the lower ranks of the service, and if that be so, the wrong should be corrected. Perhaps these employes need such counsel from their political superiors and possibly those superiors would scrupulously avoid coercion and give them only the benefit of their purest wisdom and patriotic devotion.

But it is no more cynical to doubt that they would restrain themselves, carefully avoiding hints and pressure, than it is to doubt that a patriotic and high-minded private employer would do likewise in parallel circumstances. Certainly some private employers, particularly soulless corporations, have resorted to coercion in the past and the records reek of oppression and extortion.

Private Employer 'Lucky' To Have Rights

BUT POLITICIANS have nothing to learn from private employers about coercion and extortion, and the position of Senator Barkley, as expressed in a contest in which he was the body and soul of the New Deal, is a bland justification of the conspicuous offense, committed in his own behalf, which, more than any other incident, brought about the passage of the Hatch Bill.

If this bill is wrong then the same wrong exists and has been approved by the Hatch Bill's enemies in the administration of the Wagner act. However, as President Roosevelt has said, there is no certainty that the Hatch Bill does infringe anyone's constitutional rights. There is just a possibility that it might and that possibility is being examined.

There is no such doubt, however, in the case of the private employer. The invasion of his right is admitted and defended on the ground that he is lucky to have any rights at all.

Welfare Board To Consider 2d Choice as Chief

The Board of Public Welfare Monday will consider a second candidate for the post of welfare director, it was disclosed yesterday.

Following a meeting of the Commissioners, it was indicated they would approve a local candidate if recommended by the Welfare Board. The name of a Connecticut welfare leader had been submitted to the Commissioners but the consensus of opinion among the Commissioners is "let's find a local person without detriment to the service."

It is understood if a local person could not be recommended, the Commissioners would consider the appointment of an outsider.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

The Steinbeck Country

BIG CREEK, Calif.—Californians know how to travel by automobile, how to live in motor courts, trailers and auto camps. But they don't overload their cars with books.

AT HUNTINGTON LAKE up toward the High Sierras (in California, "high mountain country begins at 9,000 or 10,000 feet, and Huntington Lake is a mere 7,000 above sea level), they are still talking about the "house auto" which camped there last summer. It was a transformed bus, "almost as big as a Greyhound," and, after it had maneuvered the winding Tollhouse grade, it established itself by the lakeside. Out of the folding back doors came a ramp, and down the ramp came an Austin car. The campers toured the back roads of the mountains all summer in their midget car, returning each night to the mother car at the lake. At the end of the summer they ran their Austin back into the house car and moved down the mountain. It was the "completest thing you ever saw," with more gadgets than a Sears Roebuck catalogue editor could think up; but not one of any of the varying and glowing accounts of the house car mentioned a book rack, or so much as a single book. They didn't use them.

At General Grant and Sequoia National Parks, in the Big Tree country, you may see a few books hiding behind the redwood souvenirs and the racks of picture postcards. I checked the stock; it included a Sierra Club bulletin on Place Names in the Sierras; Hildebrand's "Camp Cookery;" Horace Albright's "Oh, Ranger;" Linnie Marsh Wolfe's "John o' the Mountains;" John White's "Bullets and Bolos," and Fry and White's "Big Trees;" also several of the little Whitman colored flower, bird, butterfly, etc., books, which in the East are sold at the 10-cent stores. These books, I learned, had the largest sale, though they could have been of no earthly use to tourists, since all of them I saw dealt with Eastern types of animals and plants. The "Big Trees" book sold next best, being, indeed, an excellent and appropriate souvenir of the big-tree parks. Most of the other books had not sold, where I inquired, as much as a single copy since the summer season opened.

Poor John Muir—John o' the Mountains! The Californians name trails and mountain passes after him, but the tourists do not buy his books, or books about him . . . The mystery of the book about Filipinos and bolos was solved when we discovered that its author was superintendent of the park.

Perhaps the Californians are wise. The time to read about the mountains is before you go to them, or after you return. I have seen Germans sitting in a mountain meadow absorbed in books, but not Americans. The pressure to move on is too strong. We cannot sit still. Even John Muir was forever investigating what lay behind the next ridge. And an Easterner, with only a few brief days to see America first, can hardly pause to catch his breath.

YET WE carried books—a stout box full of them. I brought with me Tom Wolfe's "The Web and the Rock," thinking to read its 700 pages in cabin nights; but somehow Wolfe's sophomoric rhapsodies seemed peculiarly provincial and city bound on the desert and in the mountains, and I have not yet reached the end. I might well have brought John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath" with me for re-reading. Plenty of the Californians who never read books are talking loudly about just such "Okies" and "Arkies" as John Steinbeck brought to life, and in Rochester, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Emporia, Austin, Phoenix, Los Angeles and San Francisco every one has been talking about the book, including many who have not read it.

. . . That talk bores John Steinbeck, up on his mountainside ranch behind Los Gatos, among the biggest and reddest madrone trees in all California. He's at another job, and he doesn't see why people won't leave an author to his authoring, instead of demanding that he sign manifestos, and make speeches and turn himself into a Hollywood exhibitionist. . . . Still, I doubt that he much minded hearing of a Harvard man I found in Southern California. He was principal of a swanky boys' school when I had last seen him; the school blew up early in the depression; now he was director of a Federal employment service in a city of 3,000 population. "Grapes of Wrath," he volunteered, was the finest book yet written in America, and moreover, it was effective. His office handled plenty of "Okies," and his assistants soon tired of them. Some, he said, became as humanly callous as an Associated California Farmer, which is tops in human callousness; but he had laid in a supply of "Grapes of Wrath." The staff members sneered when they looked at it first; but the book changed them, one and all. They just couldn't be as gruff to Okies after reading it.

THE "CALIFORNIA" volume in the American Guide Series sat on the top of our book-box, but it proved less useful than I had hoped. California is a big State, and almost as full of history as Massachusetts herself, and it can't all be packed into a single volume. You turn to the book's pages eagerly and are disappointed that it finds no room for even a mention of the Kings River South Fork Canyon, which Muir called a rival of Yosemite (a brand-new highway leads into it from Grant Park), or of the wild roads of the Kings River. We meandered over eighty miles of elaborately engineered highway, starting from the Fresno Municipal Camp on Dinkey Creek and winding—coiling, rather—along the brink of the North Fork and down into the canyon, without meeting a single automobile. It was six hours' tough and lonely but beautiful driving—especially tough after we learned that the Trimmer Springs bridge, plainly marked on all the oil maps, was missing, and had to feel our way out across the foothills; the region deserves mention in a State guide.

Lucky Break For Garner

By Mark Sullivan

The Lewis Attack

THEY ARE SAYING it was a lucky break for Mr. Garner. So it was. His enemies—many think they were the New Dealers—had started a whispering campaign against him, and it had got some headway. As a whispering campaign, the charges would have had some effect. Now that Mr. John L. Lewis became too impatient to let the charges remain whispers, they will have no effect.

The indecency of Mr. Lewis making the charges at all, and the grossness of his implications, have given opportunity to the newspapers to print the facts, which they might not have been able to do had the campaign against Mr. Garner remained a whispering one. Voters who might have been disturbed by a whispering campaign will now be reassured. Other voters who might have opposed Mr. Garner on legitimate grounds of his public record, will now support him through sympathy.

It was a lucky break for Mr. Garner. But is it a lucky break for the country—that anyone should make such an attack as Mr. Lewis made, on the man who holds the second highest office in the United States, and might any day, through misadventure to the President, hold the highest? That the spokesman of a comparatively small pressure group, attempting to browbeat Congress, should do what Mr. Lewis did?

IT COULD BE a lucky break for the country, provided the country realizes the menace. In a book written by Prof. Calvin B. Hoover, of Duke University, there is an illuminating description of how democracies have fallen in Europe. In the destruction of democracy in any country, an early and essential step is destruction of the legislative branch of government. And destruction of a parliament is preceded by weakness in it and in its leaders. Parliaments fall when they succumb to terrorism directed against them. They fall because they are too civilized to use ruthlessness as a defense against the ruthlessness of those who attack them. In a pregnant sentence, Dr. Hoover says: "The survival of parliamentarianism depends on the nerves of their leaders." That sentence might be memorized by our Congress, profitably to itself and to the country.

Mr. Lewis may have been moved by either or both of two motives. For disliking Mr. Garner he has a reason, and the reason goes deeper than he revealed in his attack. It goes back 2½ years, to the time of the sit-down strikes.

Mr. Garner was among the quickest to see the seriousness of the sit-down strike as a danger to the country. Among high Government officials he was the first to see it. When Mr. Roosevelt, and his Secretary of Labor, Miss Perkins, were following a course that amounted to condoning the sit-down, at that moment Mr. Garner was quick and direct in warning. Publicly he said little or nothing, but he talked where his talking counted. Gossip said that he talked in a Cabinet meeting—and talked forcefully there. To fellow Senators and fellow party leaders he talked with weighty effect.

THE SIT-DOWN STRIKES came at the same time as President Roosevelt's attempt to change the Supreme Court. Of the two, Mr. Garner saw the sit-down strike as the more ominous. Democratic Senators who made the fight against the Court measure felt disappointed that Mr. Garner did not get more excited. He gave them sympathy, supported their fight, but told them there were two other dangers that were greater. He took the ground that even if Mr. Roosevelt won his attempt on the courts, even if he succeeded in appointing six additional Justices on the Supreme Court, the situation would cure itself in time. Ten or twenty years from now, Mr. Garner felt, the Court would again feel the sanctity that goes with a court.

But there were two menaces, Mr. Garner felt, that threatened the country immediately and fatally. There were two menaces which, if not repelled, thoroughly and at once, would change the country in a way that could not be undone later on. One was the borrowing and spending. If the Government went bankrupt, Mr. Garner said, it would change the country in a way that would be disastrous and permanent.

The other menace was the sit-down strike. If that were not checked, at once; if the Administration, and the country, did not show prompt and stern disapproval of it; if the sit-downers succeeded in establishing their device in American practice and law—if that happened, Mr. Garner told fellow-Senators, America was doomed.

WITHOUT DOUBT Mr. Lewis heard at the time of what Mr. Garner was saying, and the effect Mr. Garner was having on Senators and Democratic leaders who have high esteem for Mr. Garner's wisdom. Without doubt it has stewed in Mr. Lewis mind for 2½ years.

At the same time, Mr. Lewis could have had an additional motive. He has a vanity which, in a man in a less responsible position, might be harmless, even rather engaging. He likes to be dramatic. He is self-consciously proud of his voice, and of his eyebrows, which he undoubtedly thinks of as "beetling," and of his mane, which no doubt he thinks of as gory locks. He has read Shakespeare, memorized many passages of it. Shakespearean phrases dot his speech. The mannerisms of Shakespearean characters have entered into his personality. He dearly loves to "put on an act." The hearings of the Committee on Labor provided a fine opportunity. The rule was that witnesses should not be interrupted by cross-questioning. Mr. Lewis could bluster on to the end of his act. Without doubt he got a thrill. He may today be experiencing the letdown that sometimes follows an emotional satisfaction of ego.

Latin America And Refugees

What The Possibilities Are

THERE HAS BEEN much discussion of late regarding the possiblity of settling the persecuted Jews of European countries in Latin America. Certain basic considerations affect the choice of the southern republics as a homeland for these unfortunate people. Governments vary in their readiness to receive the victims of Hitler's racial purge. Other conditions vary even more from one country to another.

Countries which are underpopulated and whose natural resources are underdeveloped naturally offer the greatest opportunities. Among these are Argentina, Brazil and Paraguay, but not Chile or Cuba. Some regions, like the interior of British Guiana, which have been proposed as sites for settlement, are unsuitable from almost every standpoint. For example, the open campos of the Guiana hinterland, whether on the side of Brazil or of Demerara, are covered with a hard crust that no plow could break. After all, good land in the rain belt of the tropics is covered with jungle, unless it has been cleared by man.

IN VARYING DEGREES, most of the republics desire immigrants and a few of them actively encourage immigration. Above all, they want agricultural immigrants, preferably those who have been farmers in their country of origin, but at least persons who will go directly to the land on their arrival and remain on it. Skilled workers may also be acceptable, particularly in those countries which are becoming industrialized. This is all the more so if they bring with them a specialized knowledge of industrial processes or techniques in whose development the country is interested.

Persons with sufficient capital to invest in industrial enterprises are welcome, provided they are willing to accept the conditions under which manufacturing entrepreneurs are required to operate by laws of the country. These conditions pertain to such matters as taxation, import tariffs, working conditions, and ratio of native to foreign employes. As a rule, persons who engage in mercantile business, even though they possess enough capital to establish themselves in these lines, are not desired as immigrants. Although their methods may not always be the most modern, most Latin-American cities are adequately supplied with retail stores. In fact, some, like Havana, have too many stores, and competition among them is likely to be unusually severe.

Opportunities are usually greater in smaller places well removed from the metropolitan centers. However, local merchants are liable to be very resentful of newcomers who make inroads into their business either by underselling them or by better merchandizing. I recall a demonstration which I once saw in a town in Peru, directed against the too-enterprising Chinese shopkeepers who were on the way to a virtual monopoly of retail business in the locality.

THE PROFESSIONAL classes—physicians, dentists, lawyers, teachers and engineers — are usually well organized in Latin-American countries and intensely jealous of competition from foreigners. Their position is likely to be well fortified by stringent examination requirements, which often make it impossible for an alien to obtain a license to practice his profession in the country. This is in spite of the fact that in some of the smaller cities there may be a dearth of qualified native doctors and dentists.

Of lawyers there is everywhere a plethora. Though Latin America is becoming increasingly independent of foreign skill in the field of technology, opportunities occasionally exist for engineering specialists from abroad.

LATIN AMERICA wants immigrants who are willing to give up all foreign identity and attachments as rapidly as possible and to merge themselves without reservation as to race or political ideology with the native population. Nor does it want transient immigrants, who would use their countries as a stepping-stone to enter the United States. Otherwise, it desires colonists who will identify themselves wholeheartedly with the land of their adoption and contribute with their industry and skill to its economic and cultural development.

That means, among other things, a willingness to accept its customs and language and laws as their own. It also means a readiness to intermarry with the natives, which is probably the supreme test of the acceptance of foreign nationality, more convincing even than willingness to fight in defense of their foster home. The growing nationalism of the Latin-American republics demands of those who would settle within their borders a complete break with past ties, that may prove difficult for some but that is the only guarantee of a united nation.

Finally, these governments object to the grouping of newcomers in large colonies, which favor the perpetuation of old loyalties. Among such compact nuclei of "foreignism" which have been permitted to grow up in the past are the large towns of Blumenau and Joinville in Brazil, which are more German than Brazilian.

SINCE FARMING and stock-raising offer the principal opportunities for immigrants in Latin America, it is important to realize beforehand the prevailing conditions of agricultural settlement. The best land, and that most accessible to transportation and markets is held by the small class of large land-owners, which, as a rule, is also the dominant element in the politics of the countries. Those who work on these big properties are tenants or paid farm hands, usually with little chance of ever securing outright any of the land on which they toil.

Government lands available for colonization on some such basis as our old homestead system are likely to be remote from the centers of population, that is, from markets, though the lands may be otherwise desirable. Ex-Governor "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, of Oklahoma, learned this fact to his sorrow, when, several years ago, he settled a group of Oklahoma farmers on lands granted by the Bolivian government in the southeastern corner of that country. Another American colony in the montana region of eastern Peru failed even more tragically. However, good land is sometimes available by purchase from private owners in the more promising parts of some countries, and at fair prices.

A factor which should be taken into consideration by prospective agricultural immigrants is the relatively low standard of living and literacy which prevails among the generality of farm laborers and small subsistence farmers in Latin America. This is particularly true of the Indian farmers of the West Coast countries and Central America. Immigrant farmers who are enterprising may by example raise both the standards of living and production of their neighbors of the country.

EXCEPT FOR THOSE who can afford to buy good land in the settled regions, farming is liable to be a pioneering job. There are new crops to raise, new tools to use, a new climate to reckon with, and new bugs to combat. There may be clearings to be made in the forest. There will probably be no schools and only such amusements as the settlers can improvise from their own ingenuity and talents.

But there are no Gestapos, or ghettos, or concentration camps. And for those who are willing to undergo the initial hardships there is a large measure of independence and the prospect of a self-respecting life among a friendly folk—who must be their people, as the people of Naomi were Ruth's people.

Ky. Records Show Lincoln's Father Paid $200 for Land

Contrary to the traditional belief that Abraham Lincoln's father was too poor to own a farm, papers unearthed in the files of Larue County Courthouse in Kentucky prove that Thomas Lincoln paid $200 for the homestead at Hodgenville, Ky., where "Honest Abe" was born. The century-old documents on which the older Lincoln set his mark have been photographed on microfilm by the Interior Department. Eventually, the film will be stored in the National Archives.

Photographs of the records, now being used by Government historians for research in connection with Abraham Lincoln National Park, show the farm was a fairly large one, with a highway now bisecting the original holdings.

Originally found by Dr. Louis A. Warren, of Fort Wayne, Ind., these and other Kentucky court records are the means by which boundary lines of the old Lincoln property are being replotted.

Mrs. Mary Patricia White, of 1630 Park road northwest, who claimed her husband tried to make her and her two children live on potatoes, was awarded $125 a month temporary alimony by Justice Luhring in District court yesterday, pending decision of her suit for separate maintenance. She charged systematic cruelty by her husband, Ralph S. White, of 3728 Alton place northwest, an engineer with the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

She said White moved into the cellar to humiliate her and had contributed nothing to her support since Feb. 27 except a 100-pound sack of potatoes.

By the Associated Press.

Record-breaking airplane traffic from foreign countries to the United States was reported yesterday by the Customs Bureau. In the fiscal year which ended June 30, 7,739 airplanes brought 54,799 passengers into the country.

Breaking of this record is assured this fiscal year because of inauguration of transatlantic service. Last year, 28,513 plane passengers arrived at Miami from Latin America.

Chicago, July 28 (INS).—Rudy Vallee's newest ambition is to be a movie director. Love is definitely out of his life, he said today in an interview.

The shapely blond actress revealed here last night she would sue for divorce on mental cruelty grounds. She completed a personal appearance engagement at the Golden Gate Exposition last night. She left for Hollywood to see her attorney.

"I'm not happy about the whole thing at all," she said, "and it is unfortunate it had to be this way. I think I am doing the right thing. I hope so, anyway."

Parisian Finds New Comet of 8th Magnitude

Cambridge, Mass., July 28 (AP).—Discovery of a new comet near the constellation of Taurus was announced today by Harvard Observatory.

The new body, found early today by a Parisian named Rigollett, who was believed to be an amateur observer, was described in a message relayed to Harvard from the International Astronomical Bureau at Copenhagen. It was said to be of approximately the eighth magnitude.

It was found in the northeast part of the constellation Taurus, moving rather rapidly east northeastward and overtaking the sun, thus becoming increasingly harder to view, Harvard explained.

Bill Signed to Reward Finders of Bomb Mailer

President Roosevelt signed yesterday legislation authorizing payment of rewards totaling $1,200 to three claimants in the 1936 arrest of Dr. H. R. Hege, of Mount Airy, N. C., on a charge of sending a bomb through the mails which killed Curry Thomas, of Cape Charles, Va.

The rewards will be paid to Mrs. Virginia Guthrie, postmistress at South Richmond, Va., who identified Dr. Hege as the man who mailed the bomb, and Jake C. Aaron and Thomas W. Carter, jr., members of the Virginia State police, who made the arrest.

Henry N. Arnold, attorney, who died June 5, left all his property to his widow, Mrs. Sophia Arnold, of 4443 Greenwich parkway northwest. The property was valued at $135,393, minus debts of about $24,000.

Legless Vender Need Not Pay Tax To Exhibit Simian

The Commissioners yesterday had a change of heart and now Eddie Bernstein, legless pencil vender, may exhibit his monkey, Gypsy, without charge.

Under a regulation, Bernstein was required to pay a dollar-a-day tax to keep and display Gypsy. He said he couldn't afford this but the Commissioners several weeks ago turned a cold shoulder on his appeal.

Recently, Bernstein has been in the District Building waiting to see Commissioner George E. Allen. Yesterday the Commissioners instructed Edward Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, to draft an amendment which will make the display of Gypsy, as well as other captured animals, a matter for Police Chief Brown and not a matter for the tax collector.

Get a Tag, Little Doggie, or Face Last Round-up

After Monday, Poundmaster Frank B. Marks will have to round up about 16,000 tagless dogs unless their owners hurry to the District Building and lay $2 on the line.

At closing time yesterday license No. 7984 was the last distributed, and according to last year's figures there are more than twice that number of unlicensed pets.

Zoning Commission Eases Regulations

The District Zoning Commission has approved an amendment to its regulations that will permit construction of bowling alleys within 200 feet of residential property, provided approval is obtained by the Board of Zoning Adjustment and the commission.

The commission also has rezoned with few exceptions all area bounded by Second, Chesapeake, South Capitol streets and Nichols avenue southwest from residential A to residential A semi-restricted.

16th St. Heights Citizens Oppose Bus Depot Idea

The executive committee of the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association has adopted resolutions opposing the erection of a street car and bus station just west of Georgia avenue on Eastern avenue. They declare a traffic hazard already exists in that area, and furthermore the association objects to the station being placed in the residential section. The association contends that the station is designed for Maryland resident's benefit.

D.C. Heads Held to Favor New Traffic Signals

Proposed installation of traffic lights at Wisconsin and Western avenues is receiving "favorable consideration" from District traffic officials, the Keystone Automobile Club said yesterday. Officials of the club said they had received assurance that steps would soon be taken to correct traffic pressure during the rush hours at the intersection. One of the District traffic lights would be placed in Maryland, officials said.

Log Of The Manhattan

(Postmaster General James A. Farley, Chairman John Hamilton of the G. O. P., Jouett Shouse, former head of the Liberty League; Representative Hamilton Fish, Senator O'Mahoney and Mr. and Mrs. John Roosevelt were fellow passengers on the Manhattan."—New item.)

Wednesday—First day out. Crew and passengers discovered that Chairmen Farley and Hamilton were aboard and became very apprehensive. Barometer erratic. Weather clear. Atmosphere tense.

Thursday—Mr. Farley asked for a deck chair on sunny side of ship. Said sunny side would be the side Mr. Hamilton wasn't on. Mr. Hamilton made similar request and same observation. First lifeboat drill. Mr. Farley refused life preserver and gave it to Mr. Hamilton, saying he would need both. Mr. Hamilton asked directions for putting on life preserver. Mr. Farley remarked, "You ought to know. You and Landon wore 'em throughout a campaign." Mr. Hamilton rejoined, "No life preservers were used by us in that campaign." Mr. Farley replied, "What was it that held you up?" Lifeboat drill called off on account of wisecracks.

Friday—Mr. Farley indisposed as a result of a dream he found Mr. McNutt on same ticket with him. Asked for ship's doctor. Ship's doctor had previous call from Mr. Hamilton, who had a dream he was making a second attempt to put over Mr. Landon. Ship's doctor in tough spot but got out of it by pretending he had a call to the stateroom of Ham Fish. Mr. Fish insisted he was not sick, but Mr. Farley said he could not behave as he does and be well. Jouett Shouse solved problem by letting ship doctor treat him; said he has been sick ever since he joined Liberty League. Ship drill resumed. Much confusion when John and Ann Roosevelt, Jouett Shouse and Ham Fish found selves in same lifeboat. Near riot when Farley found self in same boat with Hamilton.

Saturday—Hamilton said he had a bad night. Couldn't sleep because Mr. Farley was only three doors away. Mr. Farley's answer was, "If you can't sleep near me, you can imagine how I feel with you near me." Mr. Farley added that Mr. Hamilton got plenty of sleep in the last campaign. Riot in dining room when a waiter mistakenly addressed Mr. Farley with a genial, "May I take your order, Jouett?"

Sunday—Ship captain, in fog, said he had lost course. Chairman Hamilton offered to help him find it. Chairman Farley said that if Hamilton knew the right course he would have given it to the Republican Party long before this. It was announced that Chairman Farley had won the ship's pool. On learning it was only about $200 he said, "Let Hamilton have it. The Democrats don't bother with small change any more." A sudden storm came up. In taking to the small boats Senator O'Mahoney found the last remaining lifeboat filled with Farley, Hamilton, Shouse and Ham Fish. Now he knows what a monopoly is.

Stoddards Make Cape Cod a Gay Spot

They Give Birthday Party for Comdr. Coleby and Plan Hot Dog Fete for Youngsters; Parasols the Fad in New England

FROM CAPE COD comes word that there are gay doings at the Massachusetts resort, with Newport, R. I., running a close second.

It would seem that Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, who left early in June for the Cape, are doing more than their bit to enliven the place. On Wednesday they entertained a merry gathering at Pine Knoll, West Dennis, in honor of Commander "Tony" Coleby, of the British Embassy, who was celebrating his birthday.

Mrs. Coleby was joined by her husband, the naval attache of the British Embassy, a month ago at the cottage they have taken for the season at South Yarmouth. The commander will return to his duties at the Embassy on Monday, while Mrs. Coleby, with the two children, John and Antonina, will remain at Cape Cod.

The Minister from Thailand and Mme. Rajamaitri, who, with their cunning young daughter, "Didi," left a month or so ago for the resort, were among the guests invited to toast "Tony's" health. Also in the party were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, guests of the Rajamaitris.

In honor of the occasion Teddy Stoddard and his young friend, Henry Pearson, jr., caught 50 mackerel. Just what to do with all 50 of the fish had the Stoddards somewhat stymied for a while but kindly neighbors took them off their hands—and so the day was saved.

Mrs. Charles Russell To Give Dance

Mrs. Charles Russell, who is at Wianno, will entertain at a dance Monday evening for her young daughter and her house guest, Lisette Littlehales. On the following day Mrs. Stoddard will fete the youngsters at a beach picnic. Hot dogs, roasted over an open fire, and ice cream on a stick will be the main features of the party.

The Stoddards were recent guests of Admiral and Mrs. Edward C. Kalbfuss—well known here—who are once again at The President's House at Newport.

Incidentally, our correspondent reports that Newport would seem to have gone completely mad over the parasol! The dainty Queen of England is responsible for this latest fad, no doubt.

Rules for Carrying One's Parasol

Although parasols are the rage at the resort there are rules by which they are carried. It seems one carries one's sunshade from the car through the main building to the terrace, where one stands poised for a few moments looking about for friends. The parasol is then opened and one parades up and down the boardwalk to friends or to a cabana. However (and this is important!), you emerge from your cabana, sans sunshade, in a gingham swim suit with sun glasses and sit in the hot sun for exactly the right amount to allow the tan to take.

As has been previously reported, there is a teapot tempest in Newport. Much against the will of the blue-blooded dowagers, Bailey's Beach has gone modern, with bar and dancing. Last year's hurricane had a lot to do with Newport's "downfall," for the beach was almost completely wiped out. And it has not been rebuilt to the Old Guard's liking. They even have Saturday night dances!

Lillian Smith Married to J. L. McIlvaine

Simple Ceremony Held at Home of Bride's Brother

Charming in its simplicity was the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Lillian Smith, daughter of Sidney Smith, jr., of Bonham, Tex., and the late Mrs. Smith, and James L. McIlvaine, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McIlvane, of Eads, Colo.

Both the bride and the bridegroom have been residents of Washington for some time, and their nuptial ceremony took place in the apartment of the former's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Smith, at 2656 Fifteenth street. The Rev. J. Herbert Garner officiated at 4 o'clock, before a small gathering of relatives and close friends.

The bride wore a frock of japonica silk, made on simple lines, and worn with a full-length princess coat of cream faille. A smart black hat and black accessories were other accents for her attractive ensemble, which was set off with a shoulder corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

W. R. McIlvaine was best man for his brother.

Following the ceremony, there was a reception, and shortly afterward the couple left on a short wedding trip. Returning next week, they will make their home at 5011 Wisconsin avenue.

The bride is a graduate of the College of Industrial Arts at Denton, Texas, while Mr. McIlvaine received his degree from the Colorado Agricultural College.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Men Sing Girl's Praises in Extravagant Terms; Then Don't Come Back for Month of Sundays; Why?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Why is it that Washington men hand you such a line, when you are with them, that it is almost embarrassing and sometimes quite tiresome, and then don't call you again for a month of Sundays, only to repeat the line on the next occasion? I don't get the idea. Of course, it helps the old ego to have someone tell you that you are pretty wonderful, even if he doesn't really mean it. But sometimes a little sincerity is welcomed, too.

Occasionally you meet some man you really like and would enjoy knowing better, but you are afraid he is just handing you the same old stuff. How does one differentiate? Out home, men seemed different. But as I will have to associate with the Washington variety for some time to come, I would like some enlightenment. Can you give it to me? Respectfully, NELL.

DEAR NELL: Anybody's guess is as good as mine—as to why the men you have met in Washington "hand you such a line" as to embarrass, bore and half-deceive you. Maybe you've been meeting one special kind of man—of the gallant blade variety, who loves all the ladies but knows so many of them that it takes him a month of Sundays to regularly make the rounds. You may be unusually attractive and rather on the naive side, and hence sufficiently refreshing to touch off that wellspring of poetry which resides in every masculine heart.

Then again, the men you have met here may be either (a) men who haven't a very large repertory of conversational interests, and who are far enough away from their own native habitats to feel free to try their hands at being smart and sophisticated (according to their version of same.) Or (b) men who suppose all women love to be flattered outrageously, and who further think that the average woman (particularly the attractive looking woman) hasn't enough brains to wish, or to be able, to hold up her end of an intelligent impersonal brand of talk. Or (c) men who seek the society of women as frivolous, restful relief from the heavier preoccupations which fill their working hours.

However, even the most extravagant praise of the gayest deceiver is never to be entirely discounted. Even Casanova himself (so I understand) admitted that much of his success with the ladies was due to the fact that he really meant what he said, at the moment of saying it. And the same is true of his would-be imitators, for the most part. The man doesn't live who can—or will—sing the praises of a woman whom he finds revolting or boring. But the man who waxes warmly lyrical on short acquaintance usually is a man inordinately susceptible to the charms of every charming woman. And from that type of man, of course, it is futile to expect dogged fidelity.

I think you would be wasting intellectual energy, which might be spent to better purpose, in putting the "lines" of men who have "lines," under the microscope in order to discover how much of what they say is sincere and how much is pure "spring song," so to speak. The best measuring stick of what they say—if you must have one—is your own common sense. You know what your good points are—of appearance, intellect, spirit and disposition. If and when a man praises these attributes, you may know that he is a gentleman of some discernment, who is praising you because you are you, and not merely on the ground that you are a woman.

When you meet a man you like and would enjoy knowing better, there is no need to fight shy of him simply because he seems to have kissed the blarney stone. If you tire of his "sweet talk," and don't half believe it, turn the conversation to other subjects. Learn to take compliments in your stride, letting them pass in one ear and out through the other. The man with a "line" doesn't especially want you to believe it. He is only hoping that it makes you happy to hear it.

As for the men back home—I suppose the majority of them knew you so well, or were so well known to others who knew you, that they had to be more guarded in their verbal commitments. When out of their own bailiwick, they may be—and probably are—as recklessly eloquent as any of your current undependable spellbinders. M. H.

Summery Furniture Now Inside

Attractive Rooms Can Be Fixed by Combining Pieces

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE have always turned up our nose just a bit at the idea of trying to combine summer rugs and summer furniture with interior furnishings. Let them keep their place, said we, on the porch or in the garden. But it looks as if we are going to have to take down our nose, because we have seen several attractive living rooms in the last few days that have been furnished largely with summer furniture.

Some were designed just for seasonal use to cool off the effect during the hot months; others were planned for the year 'round. It won't be long before the stores will be coming forth with clearances of summer things, so if you are in need of a few new pieces, consider the more dignified types of summer furniture in the decoration picture.

Bamboo Most Adaptable

The most generally adaptable type of summer furniture for interior use is bamboo or else rattan made to look like bamboo. There is a great vogue now for end tables or coffee tables in this type for use with either the blonde wood finishes or maple or even with eighteenth century mahogany. And you would be surprised how very smart a set of lattice-back rattan chairs look around a mahogany dining table.

Or consider a glass-top rattan table with chairs to match in your dining room for the year 'round and see how stunning the effect can be, especially if you are planning on dark walls and maybe a pale rug. A rattan bridge table with chairs to match is another accent that will fit with unexpected harmony into a conventional living room scene or make itself at home on a sun porch.

Combinations Attractive

As attractive a living room as we have seen this summer was one that utilized a combination of blonde modern furniture and bambo-type rattan. Three of the walls of the room were painted in a very creamy beige, while the fourth (fireplace) wall was done entirely in terra cotta red. On either side of the fireplace, panels of bamboo molding made squared off spaces all the way to the ceiling, in which brackets holding flower pots were placed. A large bowl of green leaves was set in the fireplace opening. The rug was a natural grass rug woven in squares.

The basic furniture was modern, in a light natural wood finish. Sofa, chairs and a bridge ensemble were in natural bamboo type rattan.

Smart Two-Piece Outfit for Fall

With the rapidity of a comet, the smart two-piece outfit above skyrockets into the midst of the fall fashion and lands with the impact of a bullet. Ideal for early autumn sports, it is especially appropriate for the first football games. Belted to give a slim waistline, the soft rabbit's hair skirt of brown, green or black, has deep pockets on each side. The gay plaid shirt-maker blouse of wool rayon with its wide, long puffed sleeves comes in red, brown and green to harmonize with the skirt

Well-Cooker Is Described As Indispensable in Cooking

By Martha Ellyn.

By The Post Food Editor.

EVEN COOKING is just a breeze when one has the convenience of an electric range well-cooker, according to our guest food editor today. Ruth Ann Parker, a home economics staff member, Electric Institute of Washington, is a native of Washington, and received her Bachelor of Science degree in home economics at George Washington University. Following her graduation in 1936, she joined the staff of the Electric Institute.

MISS PARKER

Miss Parker, when asked for her favorite recipe, not only gave it but designed an entire meal. She says: "The well-cooker is an indispensable and versatile unit. It lends itself to everything from sterilizing the baby's bottle and cooking his cereals, fruits and vegetables to cooking whole dinners for the rest of the family. Because our family enjoys soups, stews, fricassies and other foods of this type, the cooker is kept quite busy. I have also found it convenient for warming rolls and other breads. For those active in clubs and church circles and who may have the job of preparing baked beans or the like, the well-cooker is a valuable help."

Today's Health Talk

Sun, Air Bathing Retard Diseases, Build Up Health

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Many of us ascribe powers to the sun which it does not possess. The effect of sunlight on hair growth is practically nothing one way or another. There is a large school of thought that holds to the doctrine that baldness is due to wearing hats and keeping the scalp from being exposed to the sun and air. But an equally vigorous school maintains that sunlight is bad for the hair. Actual experiments, however, have been made which prove that it has no effect on the hair one way or the other.

Sunlight is real medicine, though, for certain diseases. It is a necessary factor in life. The most marvelous effects were obtained by Rollier, the Swiss physician, in treating tuberculosis of the bones and joints. Practically no other treatment was used, and with most of his patients he dispensed with casts or other forms of support of every kind. Fistulas and discharging sinuses healed up and stopped running, the bones healed and the general health was vastly improved.

It is notable, however, that another form of tuberculosis, of the lungs, is not improved; in fact, usually is made worse by too much exposure tosunlight.

The disease which is particularly related to sunlight, however, is rickets. This disease of children only is caused by the inability of the body to utilize the calcium and phosphorus salts in building bones. Even when there is plenty of calcium and phosphorus in the food, it cannot be utilized unless ihere is also the vitamin called vitamin D. Vitamin D is made in animal bodies by the effect of sunshine on the skin. Vitamin D is formed in the skin as a result of exposure to sunlight, is carried to the liver and stored there until it is needed. Rickets is, therefore, a disease of darkness and dark seasons. Take advantage of your summer sun and store up plenty of it against the dark days of next winter.

Children who get plenty of sunshine while their permanent teeth are coming in are less apt to have molar teeth decay in after years, according to British researchers.

Sun bathing and air bathing together make for vigorous health. But sun bathing can be overdone, especially by the vacationer who thinks he has to get a whole season's tan in the first few days of his vacation. Not only may a bad skin burn result; headache and insomnia may follow.

All people have regarded the sun with veneration; for the ancient Egyptians it was one of their principal gods. The Greeks and Romans had special temples of the sun. It is a good sign of our own times that an interest in outdoor life is returning, and all classes are responding to it.

Parasols Twirl Again After Visit Of English Queen

New York (AP).—Parasols are twirling again at America's smartest resorts as part of a fashion parade that is following the lead of England's queen.

Your Figure Madame!

The Perfect Figure Can Be Attained With Will Power

WHEN IT comes to making your figure over, you are your own architect and there is practically no limit to what you can do. True, you can't change your framework, but all a woman could reasonably ask is a set of perfect measurements for her structure. Those you can have.

As methodically as if you were following a blueprint, you can take down one measurement, keep another as it is, and build up a third. If your figure needs only to be slimmer—not thinner—you can perfect it with exercise. With weight above normal and measurements out of proportion, you will need both diet and exercise. In any event, you won't be able to dispense with exercise!

Keeping the Throat Young

Take a long forward step with the right foot. At the same time, swing the right arm up in front until it is straight out from the shoulder, and swing the left arm backward, palm up, in a semicircle. In completing the upswing of the arms, bend backward at the waist and tip the head back, chin up. Relax for a moment before repeating with the left foot forward. Keep your movement as rhythmical as possible.

For Slimming the Hips

For slimming the hips and molding the thighs, put this exercise down on your list:

Swing alternate legs from the hips, forward, around to the side and out in back. Rest the toes on the floor for a second after completing the swing, and return to position.

Those three exercises are simple but they constitute an excellent streamlining program for the woman who wants results rather than variety.

Seek Inspiration In Great Poetry

"Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban?
Let me live in my house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man."

WHAT A WARM, human spirit breathes in those lines from "The House by the Side of the Road," by Sam Walter Foss. Such poems are like trusted friends, never failing in kindliness, inspiration.

A thought for your daily life is this verse from "Wishing," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox:

Do you wish the world were better?
Let me tell you what to do.
Set a watch upon your actions,
Keep them always straight and true . . ."

There's rare understanding of human dignity in Rudyard Kipling's "If." Do you remember these lines?

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings—nor lose the common touch . . ."

We face life bravely after reading these lines from "Invictus," by William Ernest Henley:

Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Mary Steele, 5 Feet 10 Inches of Blonde, Successor to the Photogenic Frazier, Appears, Slightly Early, to Be 'Miss Glamor'

New York, July 28.

ALL OF A SUDDEN, there pops into the local scene a tall, grave and blond youngster named Mary Steele. Almost as though by inspiration from on high, several newspapers exploded the same day with this kiddy's picture and with stories announcing, ex cathedra, that Miss Steele inevitably would mount the tinsel throne inhabited all last winter by Miss Brenda Ducky Darling Frazier.

ALICE HUGHES

This was going a bit too far. It is bad enough to have these pretty children once the esason is under way, and have newspapers and magazines stuffing their pictures under your nose until the eyesight fails and the brain festers, But to have such dubious "inspiration" burst upon us in mid-July is almost more than we can bear. And many local observers have a definite hunch that this beating the gun will be productive of little good.

But anyway, Mary Steele has been pushed headlong into the arena even before the curtain swishes up, and here she is. She towers about 5 feet 10; wears her yellow hair in a long bob, has hazel eyes and plays the piano. The truth is that last season's crop of glamour children is beginning to disperse and the newspapers and photographers welcomed a newcomer to fill the acres of space now vacated by B. D. D. F.

Photogenic Brenda is off to the Adirondacks for the summer. Diana Barrymore, having cast off the family name of Blythe, now is playing in the summer theaters and there is some talk that she will appear in John's show, "My Dear Children," when and if it strikes Broadway. Lovely Cobina Wright, jr., if off to California with her mamma, senior, with her mind and heart set on a film career. With this break-up of the dear old Stork Club set, class of '39, the stage was set for a new face and story. And in popped Mary Steele!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Hall and I had no sooner left San Francisco than the seismographs registered a very slight earthquake shock there. Ah, well, no doubt the Good California Earth just quivered politely at our departure.

Counselor Julius Treib has found himself a pretty unpopular figure in the local baseball set recently—all because he let off a blast against feminine baseball fans after attending a ladies' day game recently. "Women don't know anything about baseball," opined the counselor, and hundreds of local ladies began to dislike him keenly and write to the papers about it. The counselor complains that lady fans at the game trampled him and even tore his suit. He probably just doesn't take the national pastime as hard as some of our girls.

I just met a young lady who has worked at both fairs this summer. She is Miss Dorothy Whalen (no kin to Grover) who toiled at the Coast show, then came here, and has now returned to her first love. She operates this "Voder" thing—the mechanical contraption which can make a more-than-human voice. Naturally, she will indulge in no comparisons between the two fairs.

My favorite New York spot is still "The Canine Beauty Salon—Plucking a Specialty," located on the snootiest section of upper Park avenue.

HELPLESS HALL got the fright of his life the other day. A very pretty young girl fairly dove at him on Madison avenue, her eyes all alight with something. "Ah, a conquest!" thought the old wretch—but she thrust a tin can at him and cooed "Won't you help the dear little babies?" He ran, in terror and despair.

A demand will face our next Legislature for simpler divorces, such as one after a five-year separation. At present, you know, divorce is granted only for that one thing in the Empire State.

THE OTHER night we were telling Stanley and Billie Marcus, of Dallas, about our Hollywood adventures with the "nutberger." They came right back with one of their home-town delicacies, the "corn dog," which is a frankfurter baked in cornbread. So now I shall have another excuse to pay them a visit in Texas.

Women Capture Plenty of Fish In Great Lakes

Montague, Mich. (AP). — Lake Michigan's commercial fishermen, who pride themselves on following one of the Nation's most hazardous occupations, have been shocked to discover that there are women who can haul a net with the best of 'em.

Every day since early May three Montague girls have been piloting a "hooker" to the fishing grounds and returning each evening with from 100 to 200 pounds of fish.

The crew is captained by Goldie Strayer, 19. Her sister, Betty, scarcely 16, handles the 27-foot hooker's gasoline engine, while another sister, Dorothy, 12, is factotum. The girls call themselves "The Strayer Fish Co."

Their daily cruises provide the only income for the Strayer family since Charles C. Strayer, veteran White Lake fishermen, was forced to go West for his health. The girls say they are more than breaking even.

"If we catch 100 pounds of fish each trip we'll be satisfied—until next fall," Goldie said, intimating the girls hope to increase their take.

They start out around 5 a. m. and don't return until 7 or 8 p. m. Coast Guards and other fishermen keep a watchful eye on the girls, but admit they handle their craft expertly.

Church of the Week

In the "Seventy-Niners," young married couples' club of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, all offices are held by couples, not individuals. Shown above conferring on matters of state are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Flickinger, club "presidents." In inset is the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, pastor of the church

When couples seek membership in the Seventy-Niners' Club of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, the first question they are asked—believe it or not—is: "How old are you?"

To be eligible for what is one of the unique church organizations in the Washington area, couples' combined ages must not exceed 79. When that happens they are automatically dropped from the roll.

Election of officers is on a "Mr. and Mrs." basis, presidents being Mr. and Mrs. Harol H. Flickinger, of 6 Crescent place, Takoma Park. Mr. and Mrs. John O'Neill serve as secretaries and Mr. and Mrs. C. R. MacKintosh as treasurers. Mr. and Mrs. Franklin T. Garrett are vice presidents.

Dues are 79 cents annually. Club activities are strictly on the informal side, socials, hobby programs, boat rides and picnics. About 100 couples are now enrolled.

Women's work at Takoma Park Presbyterian Church has made great strides since the merger four years ago of the Woman's Missionary and Ladies' Aid Societies, according to the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, pastor since 1929.

Under the present set-up, every woman automatically becomes a member of the Woman's Society, a co-ordinating group, upon joining the congregation. With the merger, all money-raising features, such as bakes, suppers, etc., were discontinued, with financial support now coming through voluntary gifts.

Meeting monthly as ten units and also as a general society, the organization, which supports missionaries at home and abroad, is headed by Mrs. Lindley H. Dennis, president; Mrs. John R. Scott, secretary, and Mrs. Fred S. Wilson, treasurer.

Scouting is one of the busiest activities at the Takomba church, which in 1912 sponsored one of the first troops in the Washington area, under the leadership of Fred L. Harries, who still serves in an honorary capacity on the church troop committee, which is led by Dr. E. A. Hallowell. Louis Flagg is scoutmaster. Troop 33 is an outgowth of Troop 21, which once served as Takoma's volunteer fire department.

Leaders of the recently organized Cub Pack 33, a younger boys' unit, are Elmer N. Bozarth, cub master, and Dr. E. L. Griffin, chairman of the cub committee. The Girl Scouts are captained by Mrs. Irving W. Johnson, while Mrs. W. H. Black capably fills the position of troop committee chairman.

The Rev. Mr. Schearrer feels proud of his church school, and is now wishing that more space were available for its manifold activities. Yesterday he indicated that in a few years, when the church's outstanding debt is liquidated, new educational building plans wuo dglo forward.

Last October a debt-fund drive, led by Elder Homer A. Smith, was conducted by the congregation, with the result that the entire debt was subscribed, to be paid over a 30-month period through parishioners' pledges. The pastor emphasized that the curch is not eager to attempt any building expansion until a financial path is cleared.

General officers of the Sunday school are John M. Sylvester, superintendent; John R. Bovard, assistant; Omar L. Crook, secretary; Walter Prichard, treasurer, and Mary D. Hardy, statistical secretary.

Departmental secretaries are Mrs. Harold S. Wood, Mrs. L. G. Berryman, Miss Bettie McKnight, Harold H. Flickinger, Miss Lois H. Judge and Hugh G. E. Paull.

Teachers of the adult units are W. Day Mullinix, the Aokiyas, the Seventy-Niners' Class; Eugene W. Bond, Bliss Class, composed of students of the Bliss Electrical School; Mrs. W. T. Simmons, the Mother Gordon Class; Harry I. Houston, the Welcome Class; Col. Frank Moorman, Young Peoples' Class, and Edward Walton, president of the Brotherhood Class. Officials of the Men's Brotherhood are Edmund L. Green, president; Allen E. Hooker, secretary, and T. K. Burrows, treasurer.

Prominent in Christian Endeavor work are Willam D. Woodell, president of the Young Peoples' Unit, of which Miss Lois McClure and Thomas D. Hardy are secretary and treasurer, respectively; John F. Burton, president of the Senior High Group, of which Elizabeth A. Magathan and Arthur R. Gould are secretary and treasurer. Junior High leaders are Janet Bovard, president; John Hollowell, secretary, and Jack Vogel, treasurer. Christian Endeavor advisers are Hughm G. E. Paull, Senior High, and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Frazer, Junior High.

The Takterian Players, thespians, are led by Roy C. Harbin, assisted by Miss Bettie McKnight, secretary, and Hugh Ferry, treasurer. The committee on ushering is under the chairmanship of Dr. J. A. LeClerc, pioneer Takoma churchman, whose aides are C. F. Ferry, W. M. Greene, C. A. Reed, Samuel Scrivener and W. T. Simmons. The ministry of music is under the direction of Mrs. Albert W. Volkmer, and Mrs. D. C. Jackson serves as organist.

Last September and October the church celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of Union Chapel and Takoma Park Presbyterian Church. For in 1888 members of several denominations formed the Union Chapel, and after five years of community worship, organized the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Mr. Schearrer stressed yesterday that denominationalism, in the narrow sense, is not now, and never has been, characteristic of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, and that today the adult membership includes many who began their association with other denominations.

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"LEAD KINDLY LIGHT"
*Rev. John H. Newman

"Lead, kindly Light, amid th' encircling gloom
Lead Thou me on;
The night is dark, and I am far from home;
Lead Thou me on;
Keep Thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene,—one step enough for me."

*Rev. John H. Newman wrote this hymn in 1833 while on the Mediterranean Sea. Detailed at Palmero for three weeks, he finally started off in an orange boat for Marseilles. While becalmed for a whole week in the Straits of Bonifacio, he wrote this hymn, which has since become a favorite.

Democrats To Meet in Alexandria

The Washington Post Bureau.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Temple 1767
Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 247.

Ardent Democrats, many of them holding Government jobs, will gather in their first convention near Washington since passage of the Hatch bill when the Young Democratic Clubs of Virginia's eighth district meet here today.

Should President Roosevelt sign the Hatch bill, drastically curtailing political activities of Federal jobholders, before the chairman's gavel falls in Armory Hall at 1:30 p. m., many of those present would be abruptly gagged. All Government employes, indeed, would lose their status as delegates and automatically become mere spectators, unless some hardy jobholder cared to risk his semi-monthly check in a test of the new law.

Rep. Darden to Speak

In case the President holds the bill, unsigned, until the convention closes, it is expected the bill itself will be the subject of considerable discussion at the convention.

Representative Darden (Democrat), of the Fourth District of Virgina, will give the keynote speech. He will be introduced by Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of the Eighth District.

Ray Larcombe to Preside

City Manager Carl L. Budwesky will extend the welcome from the city, and the invocation will be given by the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church. The Very Rev. Thomas A. Rankin, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church and dean of Northern Virginia, will pronounce the benediction.

Upper Marlboro, Hyattsville Officers Ordered Shifted, Effective Tuesday

In what was described as a move "for the good of the service," the Prince Georges County police commissioners yesterday announced the commanding officers of the Upper Marlboro and Hyattsville substations would be shifted Tuesday.

The order will send Sergt. Elon Turner to Hyattsville and Sergt. Ralph Brown to Upper Marlboro. Four new police also will be sworn and assigned to duty August 1. Wilson J. Purdy and Thomas Ray Blandford will be detailed to the Upper Marlboro station, and Wilmer C. Suit and William Russell Travers to the Hyattsville headquarters.

Police Chief Arthur W. Hepburn, and Norman Collins, secretary to the police board, denied reports of a wholesale shakeup preparatory to launching an antigambling drive in the metropolitan area of the county.

Collins said he understood the transfer of precinct commanders was the only change contemplated. The police commissioners, he said, felt that the two sergeants should become acquainted with the whole county.

Alexandria Seeks to Try 3 in Kidnaping

Two Men and Blonde Captured Near Swamp Held in Newport News

Alexandria police yesterday acted to bring into their jurisdiction two men and a blonde "gun-girl" arrested yesterday and Thursday near Newport News, Va., in connection with a Suffolk, Va., filling station robbery and kidnaping Wednesday night.

The three, for whom Alexandria Police Capt. John S. Arnold issued a detainer, also are believed to be responsible for the robbery and abduction of an Alexandria gas station operator Monday night.

At the same time, Montgomery County police, at Rockville, Md., telegraphed Virginia authorities for full details and photographs of the suspects in an investigation of the holdup of a Brentwood truck driver early Thursday, four hours after the Suffolk robbery. The truck driver, Malcolm McMichael, 28, was robbed of $2 by two men and a blonde girl, armed with pistols, on the Rockville-Frederick highway.

Newport News police called a halt to a two-day manhunt for the trio yesterday when they captured an armed man eating in a roadside diner just a few hours after a blonde 18-year-old married woman staggered from a swamp into the arms of waiting possemen. The day before they had taken a third man into custody who, they said, admitted implication in the robberies.

The woman, who identified herself as Mrs. Jack Baxley, of Orlando, Fla., stumbled bleeding and half starved from a swamp fronting on highway 168 in Warwick County. Throughout the night State Troopers A. A. Anderson and H. S. Hubbard had beat the swamp with a posse of county officers, Newport News detectives and bloodhounds used in the search for seven Federal convicts who escaped from a bus near Fredericksburg Wednesday. The woman collapsed, semi-hysterical, after her capture.

Man Seized at Roadhouse

A few hours later a man who gave his name as John W. Gross, of Denbigh, Va., was arrested at a roadhouse between Denbigh and Lee Hall.

They had been sought since late Wednesday, when Horace Butler, Suffolk filling station operator was held up by two men and a blonde girl who pushed the night attendant into the trunk compartment of an automobile, which they later abandoned a few miles north of Newport News after State troopers had put a bullet into a tire.

Thursday, police captured Robert W. Hendricks, of Richmond, Va., who according to Capt. James M. Peach, of the Newport News detective bureau, admittd taking part in the Suffolk holdup.

At Richmond, Maj. H. B. Nichols, suprintendent of State police, said the description of the woman fitted that obtained from Butler.

She and Gross, Capt. Peach said, would be charged with being fugitives from Suffolk police and two charges of grand larceny would be placed against Gross by Newport News police.

Blonde, Famished, Faints

Trooper Anderson said Mrs. Baxley emerged from the underbrush about 8 a. m. yesterday and started walking along the highway. Her clothes were torn and coated with mud. The police car drove up swiftly behind her and a trooper grabbed her. She was at the point of exhaustion when she was bundled into the car. Anderson quoted her as saying she had wandered for nearly 24 hours through the swamp and that she had had nothing but a soft drink and some crackers since the manhunt was launched.

Shortly before reaching Newport News, Mrs. Baxley fainted and had to be carried into police headquarters.

Gross was arrested while eating a sandwich. Officers said he had a gun but made no attempt to use it.

Have Bought Up to 3,000,000 Gallons A Day in the Past

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission yesterday announced its pumping station and pipe line near Ashton, Md., will be put into operation next month, thus making suburban Montgomery and Prince Georges counties independent of the District for part of their water supply in dry spells.

The pumping station at Mink Hollow, 2 miles from Ashton, will be capable of sending 8,000,000 gallons of water daily through 10,000 feet of pipe line from the Patuxent River to the headwaters of the northwest branch of the Anacostia. This additional supply, it is estimated, will be sufficient except in the event the northwest branch goes dry—a remote possibility.

Harry Shaw, deputy chief engineer, revealed that since the latter part of May, the commission frequently has been compelled to connect with the District's water supply, purchasing sometimes as much as 3,000,000 gallons a day. The northwest branch, Shaw said, has been furnishing an average of only 4,000,000 gallons daily this summer.

Begun May 22, the Mink Hollow pumping station and pipe line will cost $200,000. It is described as the first step in a broad plan, which includes the construction of a series of dams on the Patuxent so that eventually the entire water supply for both counties may be obtained from this source. The idea was conceived by the later Robert B. Morse, former chief engineer of the commission, who estimated the Patuxent was of sufficient volume to supply all future needs of the sanitary district.

The master plan calls for impounding the Patuxent as the population of the two counties increases and the need for an increased water supply arises.

Beginning near Ridgeville, Md., the Patuxent flows 100 miles through agricultural country to Solomon's Island, where it empties into Chesapeake Bay. Chemical tests have shown the water to be desirable because it is practically free from pollution and mineral content, sanitary commission engineers said.

Connecticut Avenue Work Promised

Md. Commission Puts Improvements In Montgomery First for Next Year

The long-awaited improvements to Connecticut avenue between the District line and Chevy Chase Lake probably will be made next year, Ezra B. Whitman, chairman of the Maryland Roads Commission, disclosed yesterday.

In a letter to a group of Montgomery County residents, Whitman wrote:

"There will not be any money available this year for this reconstruction work, but if we can fit it in with our program for next year, this work will be taken care then."

The letter was addressed to John F. Moran, Joseph A. Burkhart, Robert A. Keilty, John L. Weaver and Rear Admiral William Hamphill Bell.

Washington I. Cleveland, of Kensington, manager of the District of Columbia Division of the American Automobile Association, which has urged the improvements, expressed satisfaction with the decision.

"While we would, of course, be more pleased if it were possible for your commission to start work on the improvement of Connecticut avenue at once, it is most gratifying to realize that Connecticut avenue will be placed on your schedule of projects and definitely programmed for the ensuing year."

The improvement also has been strongly advocated by the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners. In a letter to the roads commission Tuesday, they placed this improvement at the top of a list of recommended highway projects.

Escape of 7 Prisoners Blamed On Lack of State Police Radio

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., July 28.—While State troopers spread their search for seven escaped Federal prisoners from northern Virginia to all sections of the State, Maj. Roy P. Bishop said today a State-wide police radio and teletype system probably would have cut the fugitives off before they could have left Virginia.

"We could have notified every State trooper within 10 minutes and had them checking the highways," he said. "The radio system would mean that the entire force would have been on the lookout for the prisoners and not just a few men pulled in from nearby communities."

The State has a police radio system under construction and plans are for the ultimate installation of a teletype system. The radio facilities, however, probably will not be ready to go into operation until next year.

State police officials said tonight State charges of kidnaping and armed robbery would be brought against the seven prisoners when captured. The charges, they said, were based on the fact the prisoners commandeered a car driven by Mrs. Ruby Lee Thurston, of Guinea, Va., and forced her to accompany them.

Many of the troopers sent to the Culpeper area Thursday to join in the hunt for the seven men, who escaped from a Department of Justice bus near Thornburg, Va., Wednesday, returned to their usual stations today with instructions to continue a close check of roads.

The car commandeered by the convicts in making their escape was found in Charleston, W. Va., Thursday, where another automobile was stolen shortly thereafter. It was believed that the convicts may have split up and part fled into West Virginia and Kentucky.

Virginia police held the theory that although the group was divided, probably some remained in the northern Virginia area, where some of the fugitives lived. However, a search lasting the better part of two days and two nights failed to uncover any clews as to their hideout, if they did remain in this State.

O'Conor Cites Md. Record For Tolerance

World Needs Same Spirit, He Says at Gotham Fair

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 28.—The world of today and tomorrow needs a little of the Maryland spirit of tolerance if it is to solve its problems, Maryland Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor said at the New York World's Fair today.

Dedicating the State's pavilion at the fair as the highlight of "Maryland Day," Gov. O'Conor said that "to respect another's rights while defending one's own has ever been Maryland's way."

"The world of 300 years ago needed the lesson of tolerance," he asserted. "But vastly more does the world of today, and of tomorrow need this Maryland spirit of tolerance if we are ever to solve successfully the pressing problems of social reform, of strife between labor and capital, of class against class and of nation against nation."

He asserted it was not "difficult in these troubled times to realize how men and women the world over look to America as the hope and promise of salvation."

The Governor and his official party received a 19-gun salute on entering the grounds. They later attended a luncheon given by Fair President Grover Whalen at Perylon Hall and reviewed the military units at Camp George Washington.

Chase Hurls Two-Hit Game to Shut Out Indians for Nats, 2-0

Holds Tribe Hitless Until Ninth; Feller Is Defeated

Webb and Solters Rob Washington Hurler of Place in Baseball's Hall of Fame

By Shirley Povich.

By the score of 2 to 0 the Nats defeated the Cleveland Indians yesterday but for 10,000 shrill Ladies Day guests and for a curly-headed former milkman named Kendall Chase, Washington's victory was a mere anti-climax.

Because as late as the ninth inning, the 25-year-old Chase was groping for the fame that comes to a no-hit pitcher, and a tense hush had settled over even the women fans who abandoned their early-inning shrieks in the mingled belief and hope that they were about to witness Griffith Stadium's first no-hit game in eight years.

And then came the ninth, and Billy Webb, a .259 hitter. Into right-field he rifled a single after working the count to three balls and two strikes, and the left-handed Chase was rudely jolted out of his visions of a no-hit performance. With a philosophical shrug of his shoulders he gripped the ball again, yielded a scratch hit to Julius Solters before the inning was over, and shut the Indians out in that ninth even as he had done in eight preceding innings.

Retires 19 in Row

For Chase, regarded as a confirmed in-and-outer on the Nats' staff, it was his supreme pitching job in the four years he had been pitching for Washington. Tossed into the game as something akin to a sparmate for the famed Bobby Feller, Cleveland's pitching choice, Chase filched the show with his two-hit performance.

Not until the seventh inning did Chase permit an Indian to reach first base. The first 19 men to face him went out in order, and then with one out in the seventh he walked Roy Weatherly. With two out, he walked Ben Chapman, but those were the only passes he issued.

He had it yesterday—both his speed and control. Cleveland batters, accustomed to the left hander's wildness, rarely offered at the first pitch only to hear Umpire-In-Chief Steve Basil check a strike against them. Catcher Tony Giuliani, beaming in the clubhouse after the game, declared that Chase never before had exhibited such control of his fast ball. He was always ahead of the hitter.

When the final out of the game—Sammy Hale's fly to rightfield—settled into Sammy West's hand to seal Chase's triumph, the pitcher's teammates all but mobbed him on his way to the dressing room. In the clubhouse, Clark Griffith pumped the pitcher's hand in congratulation.

West Wins Game

Rivaling Chase's superb pitching in fan interest was the continual bickering of the Indians with Umpire-in-Chief Basil. Manager Oscar Vitt, chafing at the futility of his club against Chase, stormed to the plate a half dozen times to argue with Basil like a gibbering fishwife. Basil threatened to banish Vitt from the scene and eventually, in the sixth inning, he did walk to the Cleveland dugout and single out Pitchers Mel Harder and Floyd Stromme as the loudest hecklers. He thumbed the pair to the showers.

But before this, perhaps, some mention should have been made of Sammy West, the gent who actually won the game for the Nats. It was West who beat Bob Feller with a stinging triple that produced the two runs of the ball game in the third inning. Eight hits the Nats collected against Feller who, save for the third inning, bore down magnificently and left eleven runners holding the bags.

Before the game was over, West

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Until 5:20 p. m. yesterday when the unfeeling Mr. Billy Webb of the Cleveland Indians banged a single to rightfield in the ninth inning we were going to take as our topic today the no-hit game that Ken Chase pitched. It seems that he didn't quite check in with that no-hitter, but his hitless performance for eight innings is excuse enough to drag out some choice pitching data of the past.

POVICH

Chase isn't the first guy whose no-hit dreams turned nightmarish in the ninth inning. When he saw Webb single to right in the ninth for Cleveland's first hit of the game, he knew how a slew of other pitchers have felt about the same sort of thing. He knew, for example, how Tommy Bridges felt about it that day in Detroit ten years ago when Dave Harris swaggered to the plate and thumped a hit into leftfield.

The ruination of Bridges' no-hit dreams was even more painful than the jolt suffered by Chase yesterday. Because Bridges had pitched eight and two-thirds innings of hitless ball and needed only one more to join the pitchers' hall of fame. Dave Harris' hit that day caused something of a row, too.

Walter Johnson was managing the Nats and the Tigers had a 9-0 lead when Johnson sent Harris in as a pinch hitter. Many folks were surprised at that move by Johnson inasmuch as Harris was known as something of a nemesis for Bridges and used to boast that "Bridges is keeping me in the league." They didn't suppose Johnson would deliberately try to ruin Bridges' no-hitter at a time when his club was trailing by nine runs with two out.

"No Soft Touches," Said Walter

But Johnson sent Harris to the plate and when Harris delivered the hit that shut the doors to fame in Bridges' face, the Nats' manager had an unshakable defense. "A pitcher shouldn't get any soft touches if he's trying for a no-hitter," said Johnson. "He should earn it fairly against the best hitters a club can send up there. Easing up on the pitcher would only cheapen a no-hit game."

Another Washington manager, Bucky Harris, similarly was party to ruining a no-hit game. Ted Blankenship, of the Chicago White Sox, was on the brink of a no-hitter in Griffith Stadium in 1926, had two men out in the ninth. Then Harris sent the veteran Bobby Veach in to pinch hit. Veach delivered a sharp single to right and bloole went Blankenship's notions about a no-hitter.

But a no-hit game isn't always the hallmark of a great pitcher. It's somewhat akin to golf's hole-in-one at which the duffer excels rather than the pro. Some comparative pitching bums have turned in no-hit performances, and it's a fact that Walter Johnson, the greatest pitcher of them all, could hurl only one no-hitter in 20 years in the big leagues. And that game took place in 1920, long after Johnson had passed his pitching peak.

The One-Hitter of Bobby Burke

The last no-hit game ever pitched at Griffith Stadium is in point. It was pitched by, of all people, Bobbie Burke. Now nobody ever accused Burke of being a great pitcher or even a good one. Some folks have been kind enough to say that Burke is the only pitcher in the big leagues who was sent back to the minors after an eight-year tryout in the majors. But on August 8, 1931 Burke hurled a no-hitter against the Boston Red Sox.

For a time yesterday, the more optimistic customers were toying with the notion that Chase might pitch a so-called perfect game—a no-hit, no-man-reach first affair. But a walk to Weatherly in the seventh inning dispelled that vision, although Chase still was within reach of a no-hit job.

If it had been a no-man-reach-first feat, then it would have been the first such performance since 1922 when Charley (No-Hit) Robertson of the White Sox turned the trick against the Detroit Tigers, the fiercest slugging club of the era. But one perfect game is no indication, either, of a pitcher's lasting greatness because Robertson couldn't even stick in the big leagues two seasons later.

That Famed Double No-Hitter

The greatest single dose of no-hit pitching was probably the performance by big Jim Vaughan of the Cubs and Fred Toney of the Reds on the same afternoon, May 2, 1917. On that day, as opposing pitchers, both Vaughan and Toney turned in no-hit feats, the Reds winning, 1-0, in ten innings.

How would you like to pitch a no-hit game and lose it? That's what happened to Buck Newsom not so many years ago when he was serving his first term with the Browns. For nine innings Newsom shut the Cleveland Indians out without a hit, only to be licked in the tenth on the only blow he did surrender.

But the classic no-hit game of all time is probably that of Ernie Shore's. In fact Shore pitched a no-hitter without starting the game. On June 23, 1917, Babe Ruth was the starting pitcher for the Red Sox against Washington and walked Ray Morgan, the first man to face him. Ruth argued with Umpire Brick Owens on the fourth ball to Morgan and was tossed out of the game. Without warming up, Shore went into the box for the Red Sox. Morgan was caught trying to steal second, and for the rest of the game not another Washington batter reached base. After some debate by league officials, Shore was credited with a no-hitter.

Bob Loane Makes Debut With Nats

The husky, right-handed hitter, who brought a .331 batting average from the Eastern League, arrived before the game yesterday, but Manager Bucky Harris withheld him from action. "Batting against Bob Feller is no way for a rookie to break into the majors," said Harris.

Los Angeles Girls Set New Swim Mark

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, July 28.—A quartet of young swimming sprinters representing the Los Angeles Athletic Club, flashed through the Dirdland Pool waters tonight to establish a new national 400-meter relay record in the Senior Women's National A. A. U. swimming championships.

Anchored by Esther Williams, who won the national 100-meter title here yesterday, the far western team turned in a record-time of 4:46, clipping 08.8 seconds off the mark made by another Los Angeles team in 1931.

Virginia Hopkins, red-haired lass who held the 100-yard championship in 1938, started the Los Angeles team to victory. She gave her team mates an advantage they never lost as Marian Hopkins, twin sister of the former champion; Eleanor Chamberlain and Miss Williams whipped through the cool waters.

The Multnomah A. C. of Portland, Ore., which finished second, also shot under the previous national record, finishing in 4:51.3. Nancy Lewis, Mary Ann Hansen, Nancy Merki and Breda Helser were members of the Oregon quartet.

In the third place was the Lakeside Civic Club, of Louisville, Ky., just ahead of the Women's Swimming Association team of New York City. The Broadwood A. C. of Philadelphia was fifth and last.

Abe Espinosa And Harrison Pace Golfers

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Minn., July 2.—Par met its annual Waterloo today at the $7,500 St. Paul Open Golf championship at the Keller course.

After a day of first-round firing which saw 26 players crack regulation figures, Abe Espinosa, of Chicago, and Ernie (Dutch) Harrison, of Little Rock, Ark., found themselves pacing the field, each with five under par 67's. They were just two of a group of topnotchers who also turned in brilliant subpar cards to be in the thick of the battle for the tourney's $1,600 first money.

One was golf's "hottest" figure of the year, Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., the National and Western Open champion. He had a 68, as did Dapper Dick Detz, of Chicago, and Len Mattson, Keller course professional.

In the 69 bracket were Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., the P. G. A. champion and top money winner of the year; Ray Mangrum, slim professional from Oakmont, Pa., and Joe Coria, St. Paul. The 70 shooters were Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa.; Bunny Torpey, Dodson, Mo.; Gene Sarazen, the golfing squire from Brookfield Center, Conn.; Ky Laffoon, of Chicago; Ralph Guldahl, of Madison, N. J., former National and Western Open titleholder; Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, and K. C. Zabowski, of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Gordon and Szwedko In Publinks Finals

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, July 28.—The people's choice, Hawaii's Arthur Armstrong, and his roomate, Officer Jim Molinari, were homeward bound tonight, upset victims, and the National Public Links championship rested between a pair of outsiders.

From the upper bracket, Phil Gordon, a fine shot maker from Oakland, Calif., an alternate from his district, and from the lower, Andy Szwedko, veteran of seven tournaments, advanced to the title round where they will meet for the eighteenth Public Links championship over the Mount Pleasant course at 9:30 and 2 o'clock tomorrow.

Szwedko, a 31-year-old steel mill worker from Pittsburgh, wrapped enough iron shots around the pin to beat Armstrong 1 up, in one of the closest battles in tournament history. Gordon routed Molinari, 3 and 2, in a match that was not near as close as the score would indicate.

Gordon, 22-year-old insurance clerk from Oakland, won four of the first eight holes against Molinari, the San Francisco scout car cop, and took it easy with leads that ranged from 3 to 6 up from that point to the thirty-fourth hole, where he finally put an end to it with a halve in pars.

While those two were playing in comparative privacy, several thousand fans, who made no secret of their partiality for the Hawaiian, remained faithful to the thirty-sixth green, but when their hero missed a 15-foot putt for a birdie and Szwedko played safe for a par and the match, they gave him a tremendous hand and formed a "Szwedko-for-champion" club for tomorrow's finals.

Armstrong played the first nine in approximately two over par for a two-hole lead, and made it three on the twelfth. Szwedko came back in a hurry with a birdie, eagle and two hole-winning pars to erase the advantage and Armstrong had to win the eighteenth hole to even the match at the end of the morning round.

Shot-for-Shot Battle

Only 3 of the 18 holes of the afternoon battle were won or lost. After the little Hawaiian, finalist when he played in this tournament at the age of 16, had his aching feet bandaged at intermission, they started and Szwedko went one up on the twentieth when Armstrong was short in two and took five to get down.

They played shot for shot from there to the twenty-fifth, when the Pittsburgher lost his lead by driving in the woods, and conceded the hole, the second time he lost the hole with an "X" today, they reached the three-quarter mark all even, and then Armstrong lost the fatal twenty-ninth when his iron shot on the 183-yard par 3 was short and he chipped poorly and Andy's par won the hole.

They halved the next seven holes. Both hit the cup in birdie tries on the thirty-first, and on the thirty-third, Szwedko chipped out of the heavy grass around the green dead

Bucs Trade Suhr For Phils' Butcher, Undisclosed Cash

Pittsburgh, July 28.—Gus Suhr, Pittsburgh Pirates' first baseman and captain, was traded to the Philadelphia Phillies for Pitcher Max Butcher and an undisclosed amount of cash, Bill Benswanger, president of the Pirates, announced tonight.

SUHR

The deal was consummated late this afternoon when Gerry Nugent, owner of the last place Phillies, telephoned Benswanger.

Pirate Manager Pie Traynor believed the trade will help both clubs. He said the deal was made with Manager Doc Prothro of the Phils following the series here this week.

Suhr was ordered to report to the Phils in Cincinnati immediately.

2d White Marlin Mark in Two Days Set at Ocean City

For the second consecutive day the world record for group marlin fishing was broken yesterday when a fleet of 40 boats brought in 118 of the kicking white beauties off Ocean City, Md. The haul averaged between 80 and 85 pounds and was taken over a 10-mile area. Twenty of the fish were tagged by the U. S. Government and released.

On Thursday, when the fleet came in, it was found that 72 marlin had been caught, breaking the previous record by 32 fish. Old skippers along the waterfront were of the opinion that the 118 mark would stand for some time in these waters as well as elsewhere.

Yankees End Smith's Spell, Beat Chisox

By the Associated Press

New York, July 28.—The mastery that Edgar Smith has exerted over the Yankees this season deserted him today when Red Rolfe singled in the ninth with the bases full and the Yankees beat the Chicago White Sox, 2-1.

Smith had stopped the Yankees twice before and it looked as though he would bring in No. 3, until the fatal ninth.

At that time the score was tied 1-1, as each team had tallied on a home run—the White Sox on Joe Kuhel's in the first and the Yankees on Joe Gordon's in the seventh.

George Selkirk opened the ninth with a single, took third on Babe Dahlgren's double and then a pass to Buddy Rosar, hitting for Oral Hildebrand, the pitcher, filled the bases. Then Rolfe broke up the game.

Hunt Leads Parker as Rain Halts Play in Seabright Meet

McNeill Wins First Set From Bitsy Grant in Other Semifinal

By International News Service

Seabright, N. J., July 28.—Welcomed by drought-ridden farmers, but baneful to the tennis players participating in the fifty-second annual Seabright Tennis Club tourney, a rainstorm flooded the courts today and caused postponement until tomorrow of the semifinal men's and women's singles matches.

Before the minature deluge turned the greensward into a series of lakes, Donald McNeill, of Oklahoma, had gained a set from Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., seeded third, and was leading, 1-0, in the second set.

Frank Parker, Pasadena, Calif., seeded fifth, was behind Gilbert Hunt, Washington, D. C., 5-3, in the initial set of the other semifinal. The men's contests will be resumed from the point of interruption tomorrow morning with the semifinals of the women's play, bringing together Dorothy Bundy vs. Helen Bernhard and Dorothy Workman vs. Patricia Canning being played at the same time.

The final of the women's doubles will take place in the afternoon with Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan and Helen Jacobs opposing Mrs. Dorothy Andrus and Mme. Sylvia Herotin. The men's doubles semifinal also will be decided in the afternoon.

Finals in the men's and women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles will take place Sunday afternoon.

Players and officials alike vehemently denied the story that a strike had been threatened unless the so-called "furry" ball, criticized by a majority of the players, was eliminated.

A mild petition against the ball, signed by only ten netmen and not brought to the attention of the brass hats of the sports, was responsible for the tall tale. In the protest, the signers definitely stated that a strike was not contemplated and merely suggested that two different balls be used in the future, one for grass and onther for clay court play.

The American intergame Davis Cup final between Cuba and Australia will be played at Seabright on August 10, 11, 12, it was announced by Capt. Walter Pate, United States Davis Cup official.

to the cup for a halve in pars. They lipped the cup again on the thirty-fourth and then Armstrong lost his chance on the thirty-fifth to send the match into extra holes. They were both short of the green, off the tee, with long irons, and Armstrong chipped within 3 feet while Szwedko exploded out of deep rough, over the green. He chipped back 3 feet from the hole, Armstrong putted and missed, Szwedko dropped his and they halved the thirty-sixth in regulation fours for the match.

Molinari Is 5 Down

Gordon was two under par with a 70 as he turned five up over Molinari in the first round. After making it six on the nineteenth with a birdie four, he lost the twentieth, three-putted the twenty-third and lost the twenty-fourth to a deuce and his margin was cut to three. He tightened up here, however, won the next hole and the twenty-seventh with pars and was five up again.

Molinari, stalking out the fairway from 50 to 100 yards ahead of Gordon after every shot, won two more holes in a row but it was a futile battle as Gordon always came back to make up the deficit, and went dormie four up with a birdie on the thirty-second. He lost the next by trapping his second shot and Molinari, who bends his 6-foot frame way over the club and chokes his club nearly to the steel shaft, went out of the tournament when they halved the thirty-fourth in par.

Szwedko, a semifinalist in his best previous appearance, lost to Champion Al Leach last year and three years ago, was a victim of Otto Greiner, this city's outstanding amateur golfer. Gordon has only played in one tournament prior to this, and was beaten in the third round.

Gordon, whose swing is probably the best in the tournament, was 2 over par for the day, while Szwedko was 1 over for 34 holes, not counting the two X's.

Szwedko is the fullback type, 5 feet 11 and around 200 pounds, while Gordon is the same height and weighs 170.

Tomorrow's battle for the Standish Trophy, although not as inviting as a Molinari-Armstrong final, is expected to draw more than 5,000 fans to the Hillen Road course. The crowd was around the 5,000 mark today, despite the heat.

Tamulis, Casey Beat Cards For Dodgers

Flock Takes 5-4 Game From Redbirds; Ducky Medwick Hits Homer

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 28.—The Brooklyn Dodgers ended a two-game losing streak of their own and pushed the St. Louis Cardinals to third place in the tight National League race with a 5-4 victory today.

The Dodgers pummelled Morton Cooper, rookie right-hander, and Lefty Dusty Shoun for 13 hits. Johnny Hudson, leading off, got four of them, of which two were doubles.

Vito Tamulis started for the Dodgers but was forced to leave in the eighth, while pitching to Don Gutteridge, because of a stomache ailment. Hugh Casey finished.

Tamulis, given credit for his fourth win of the year yielded eight of the nine hits the Cards got, and was in frequent trouble because of six Brooklyn errors.

Three of the Cardinal runs were unearned, but one that was earned was Joe Medwick's seventh homer of the season.

Turner Holds Bucs As Bees Prevail, 7-1

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 28.—Jim Turner's slow ball and the cracking bats of Max West and Tony Cuccinello proved too much for the Pittsburgh Pirates today and the Boston Bees won the opening game of their series, 7 to 1.

West and Cuccinello scored three runs and batted in two others. West hit his eleventh homer of the season in the fifth with Hassett on base.

Turner scattered nine Pirate hits through six innings and was never in danger. Mace Brown yielded nine hits in four and a third innings to give the Bees a big lead. Bill Clemensen relieved Brown in the fifth and allowed only two hits the rest of the way.

Wooderson Injured, Retires for Season

Star English Runner Has Torn Muscle; To Rest for Olympics

By Drew Middleton

Associated Press Sports Writer

London, July 28.—A torn leg muscle forced Sydney Wooderson to the sidelines for the balance of the season today and temporarily dashed his hopes of proving to the track world he is a "racer" as well as a "runner."

The little solicitor, who holds the world record of 4:06.4 for the mile, was bitter about the injury that will keep him out of the mile in the international meet at White City August 7 and a chance for revenge against Blaine rideout.

" Itw asmycenahc typeuDgna "It was my chance to make up for my miserable showing in America," he said.

Pride Hurt

Wooderson's defeat by Chunck Fenske, Glenn Cunningham, Archie San Romani and Rideout at Princeton hurt his pride. The Princeton race was the scene of the much-publicized bumping incident between Rideout and Wooderson, with Fenske coming on to win as the Englishman finished last in the field of five.

He was determined to show the world he's not only a great runner against time, as his world records at 800 meters and 880 yards in handicap races, and his mile in a paced event show, but that he's just as great against competition.

"They're saying I can't race; that I'm just a runner," he said. "I had hoped to show them I was both but that will have to be put off for a while."

Wooderson has been disappointing to his fanatic followers since returning from the United States laden with presents and excuses. But no one thought the injury he suffered Wednesday in an exhibition mile at Newcastle would put him on the sidelines.

Specialist's Advice

However, he sadly announced today a specialist had warned him to give up racing for the remainder of the season.

"I have strained the heart of the calf muscle where it joins the Achilles tendon," Sydney said, "and there is considerable inflammation.

"I want to be fit for the Olympic games next year, so I'm going to leave track until next spring."

He is a worried little guy, ridden by fears of injury. A twisted ankle that might have healed if he had given it sufficient rest kept him from showing his best in the 1936 Olympics. He is dead set on winning the 1,500 at Helsinki next year.

Cubs Win, 5-4; Loss Is New York's 13th In Last 15 Contests

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 28.—First Baseman Glen Russell's ninth-inning home run gave the Chicago Cubs a 5-to-4 decision over the Giants for the New Yorkers' thirteenth loss in their last 15 games.

The score was tied when Russell slammed the ball over the leftfield wall and gave Relief Hurler Jack Russell a pitching victory.

Bill Lohrman was the victim, losing his eighth game.

The Cubs got away to a 2-to-0 lead in the second. Then the Giants forged ahead with a pair in the sixth and one each in the seventh and eighth. The Cubs tied it in their half of the eighth and later Russell broke up the game.

Laabs' Homer Help Browns Win One, 11-6

St. Louis Ends 10-Game Losing Streak With Victory Over Bosox

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 28.—The lowly St. Louis Browns snapped out of a ten-game losing streak today to comb three Red Sox pitchers for 14 hits and an 11-to-6 victory featured by Chet Laabs' grand slam homer in the first inning. Browns' Catcher Joe Glenn contributed with two homers.

With two men out and the bases loaded, Laabs poked one of Elden Auker's submarine pitches into the net over the leftfield wall to get the Brownies off to a four-run lead.

Auker was chased to the showers after allowing six hits in one and one-third innings, and Sayles, the Sox new rookie hurler, relieved him only to give way to Joe Heving in the third. Sayles walked three men and allowed one hit in one and two-thirds innings.

Teddy Williams blasted a two-bagger for the Sockers' only extra base hit in their second straight defeat.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 28.—Strictly poisonal:

Atley Donald, the 26-year-old Yankee righthander who has won 12 and lost no games this year, is a career man in the Yankee baseball empire . . . He walked into the Yanks training camp at St. Petersburg in the spring of 1934 . . . They sent him to Wheeling, their lowliest farm team, for 1934, advanced him to Norfolk in 1935, Binghamton in 1936 and Newark in 1937 and 1938 . . . He won 35 and lost 9 during his two years at Newark . . . With a perfect apprenticeship behind him, and perhaps 10 years ahead of him, he is the most phenomenally successful rookie in the history of pitching . . . He is within three victories of beating Jack Chesbro's 34-year-old Yankee record of 14 consecutive victories . . . And within five of breaking the American League record of 16 straight, which is shared by Walter Johnson, Joe Wood, Lefty Grove and Schoolboy Rowe . . . He has a fine earned run average of 2.51 this year . . . He has that quietly confident air that is the mark of all the Yanks . . . Looks like a masculine Bing Crosby, and wishes people would call him Richard, his first name, instead of Atley . . . He can't see any great difference between the caliber of pitching and the caliber of hitting in the big league, as opposed to Newark . . . The prime difference that he can see is the fielding . . . The big league infielders make great pitchers great, he has decided

CONSIDINE

Helen Wills Moody is going to decide within the next few days whether or not to play in the National singles this year . . . If she decides to play she'll go into several warm-up tournaments to whet what amounts to her killer instinct . . . Helen's murder mystery, "Death Serves an Ace," comes out August 7. . . . She is busy mapping out her second novel, but she's been practicing a lot with Gil Hall, and the Czecho-Slovakian named Hecht with the unpronounceable first name . . . She writes for two hours every day, in her little modernistic Park Avenue garret . . . Alice Marble shows some pretty good horse, or filly, sense in saying she will not turn pro . . . They way she works it now she can get singing, modeling and perhaps movie jobs on the strength of her tennis reputation without turning pro . . . Between jobs she is practically the charge of the U. S. L. T. A., which picks up the bills for her European excursions . . . The Australians would be saps to okay any change in the current tennis ball that is the official sphere of our big league play . . . It has an almost abnormal amount of fuzz on its cover, which slows down the speed of the hard hitters and helps the boys whose forte is keeping the ball in play . . . That's where the Aussies shine, keeping that pill coming back over the net.

'Befuddled' Is Good Word for Fighters

Joe Louis has learned a new word . . . It's "befuddled," which he picked up from moodily digested accounts of his first Schmeling fight . . . He launched the word recently when he came into the dressing room of Roscoe Toles after Toles had been given a good beating by Bob Pastor . . . "You were all right, Roscoe," Joe said, "but you're befuddled" . . . Col. E. R. Bradley, the old gambler who owned four Derby winners, is gravely ill again.

Joe Cronin couldn't have thought of a better year to have a fine inspirational season . . . This is the last year of the 5-year contract which Tom Yawkey gave him in 1935, at the firm insistence of Joe's pappy-in-law, Clark Griffith . . . The best polo in the country is being played by Bob Skene, the Frederic March-like Australian . . . The death and destruction wrought by polo this season (in a sport like baseball a similar toll would have been regarded as one of sports' greatest calamities) has induced the Meadowbrook Club to institute safety rules which will be universally adopted by the polo association this winter . . . How about a Kayak II, Johnstown, Challedon race? . . . It would draw more than any park can hold.

It's all very well to point out that the home run production this year isn't what it was, but Jimmy Foxx has quietly smacked out his twenty-fourth of the season . . . That's not too far behind Hank Greenberg's 1938 pace . . . Hank hit his twenty-fourth July 9 in his seventy-fourth game of the season . . . Foxx, out of the line-up for a week, has played in only 79 games.

Bad Hands Hamper British Boxers

Lloyd's of London won't take a bet against duplication of a player's hole in one . . . Nat Lifkin, the fighter who was knocked stiff and hurt when a heavy bag he was punching broke loose from its moorings and fell on him, is coming back to the wars . . . Most English fighters have bad hands, Henry Armstrong found . . . The boxing commissions won't let them use enough tape across the backs of their hands, which are the weakest points of fists . . .

The St. Louis Browns, after being offered a $10,000 melon to slice, if they finished sixth, $15,000 if they finished fifth and $20,000 if they finished fourth, promptly went into a nine-game losing streak . . . Moving a bankrupt team like the Browns to richer pastures isn't as easy a task as it seems to the average fan . . . The American Association certainly won't give up its Kansas City franchise and make way for the Browns, for the Blues are a bigger and much, much more profitable organization than the Browns . . . Donald Barnes would find the same trouble in any big minor league town in which he tried to place his beleaguered club.

Arlington Futurity Draws 12 Turf Stars

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 28.—Twelve thoroughbred youngsters, some of them tabbed as potential threats in the Kentucky Derby next spring, meet tomorrow in the $50,000 Arlington Futurity as Arlington Park winds up a 30-day meeting.

In addition, the $5,000 added Arlington Handicap will be decided with Mrs. John D. Hertz's Count D'Or, winner of the Stars and Stripes Handicap, probably going to the post a top-heavy favorite.

Four speedy 2-year-olds have come from the East to match strides with their Western rivals. They are Col. Edward R. Bradley's Bimelech; Boy Angler, owned by Mrs. C. F. Sheldon, New York; Roman Flag, entry of Arnold Hanger, New York, and Straight Lead, entry of Mrs. Parker Corning, Albany, N. Y. Bimelech and Boy Angler will run as an entry, and so will Roman Flag and Straight Lead.

The West will put its main reliance in the Woolford Farm's Quenemo, a consistent winner; Russell Firestone's Marogay; Tough Hombre, entry of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, Chicago, and J. O. Keene's War Beauty, which finished a driving second to A. G. Vanderbilt's Now What in the Lassie Stakes. She will be the only filly in the field. Bimelech and Boy Angler started twice and won twice. Boy Angler's sire is one of Col. Bradley's four Kentucky Derby winners, Burgoo King, while Bimelech is a son of Black Toney.

The race at 6 furlongs will have a gross value of $49,830, provided 12 go to the post, with $35,735 going to the winning owner.

Don Meade, leading the Nation's jockeys after a comeback that began in Florida last winter, will be astride Boy Angler, provided the Illinois Racing Commission grants him a license. Suspended for life by Florida commission for betting on another horse in the same race in which he rode, Meade was reinstated last winter after being out of the saddle for two years. Subsequently, he was permitted to ride in New York, Maryland and New England.

In attendance and betting, Arlington Park is way above its 1938 figures. The betting this year is $250,000 higher than a year ago, when $8,700,000 passed through the mutuel machines.

Riotous Breaks Record in Feature Race at Bel Air Track

Takes Early Lead to Win In 1:27 Flat

Dark May Is Winner Of Second Money in Feature; Wahcoo Third; Forbes Victor

Special Dispatch to The Post

Bel Air, Md., July 28.—The Forest Hill, seven-eighths-mile feature, run before 9,000 fans, saw J. H. C. Forbes' Riotous lead throughout to establish a new track record of 1:27.

Dark May, owned by A. H. Utterback, of Virginia, came from a long way back to take the place from Mrs. Janon Fisher, jr.'s, Wahcoo and seven others. It was the second score of the day for Trainer Forbes, he having previously saddled Mrs. Robert H. Heighe's Palkin, winner of the second.

Seven maiden jumpers met in the Long Green Valley Steeplechase, four falling, with the winner turning up in J. Fred Adams, jr.'s, Jacamar, favorite. Mrs. G. C. Everhart's Guatemala was remounted and came on to take fourth money.

E. A. Russell and J. Nichols, riders of Anchors Down and Leslie Myer, respectively, suffered bruises about the head and body when their mounts fell in the jumping race.

Miss Judy Johnson left a Baltimore hospital today, where she had been confined since she fell while schooling Battalion, a steeplechaser belonging to T. T. Mott, of Washington. She went to the Nation's Capital to recuperate.

ESPINO GOLD, away in the first flight, gained a short lead, met strong contention from PAPER GIRL and rallied to punishment in the last furlong. NANCI'S BEST was a stout contender from the beginning, finished on the outside and was racing gamely. MOLASSES JULIA was squeezed back slightly rounding the turn while on the inside, rallied gamely when obtaining racing room along the rail during the stretch drive and finished gamely. PAPER GIRL, very fractious at the gate, raced stoutly for a half mile, then weakened. STINGY LADY could not reach the leaders. BRIERLY lost ground and failed to menace. HENORA was never a threat. ALL HANDS was outrun. CHILLEEVALLEE broke poorly and had no chance.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PALKIN, $8.80, $4.70, $3.30; BETWICK, $4.10, $3.20; SWING KING, $5.20.

PALKIN was rushed hard to get to the front early, set a good pace in the early racing, stalled off SWING KING and rallied to a stout drive in the late stages to draw clear slowly. BETWICK, hard ridden to keep within striking distance of the leaders, finished gamely in the final drive. SWING KING was under strong pressure while forcing pace, but could not keep up. WHAT TIME, prominent for six furlongs, tired. WELSH STAR was done after going five furlongs. GOLDHED had no mishaps. CARRIE GRAND was never dangerous. BEST TIME was outrun. The others were not serious.

Daily Double, Espino Gold and Palkin, Paid $25.50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACAMAR, $5.10, $3.10, $2.50; GRUMPY, $3.20, $2.60; GNOMNIE, $3.70.

JACAMAR, steadied for the first mile, went to the front nearing the eleventh jump, opened up a wide lead, saved ground and held away to the end. GRUMPY engaged the pacemaker at the eighth fence, landed badly at the twelfth to drop back and was an easy second when GUATEMALA went very wide while setting the pace. The latter began tiring after 1½ miles and fell at the thirteenth jump, but was remounted to finish. OLAN ran out of the course going to the fourth fence. LESLIE MYER lost his rider at the third fence, and ANCHORS DOWN fell at the first jump.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NEEDMORE, $29.40, $13.30, $9.20; SHANTEB, $4.90, $3.40; SOUPCON, $12.30.

NEEDMORE broke fast and clear to take command at once, set a fast pace all the way, saved ground and held on tenaciously in the closing drive. SHANTEB was close up from the start and came stoutly in the closing drive. SOUPCON bettered his position admirably and outstayed HURDY GURDY nearing the close. The latter suffered interference at the first turn, removed her position likewise, but could not reach the leaders. STAR TURN was hurried along with the leaders and weakened. NERVY NELLA tired after five furlongs. ROSIN raced poorly. TROUT STREAM was held safe and went wide. QUICK ACTION showed nothing.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. The Forest Hill. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:17. Off 4:22. Winner, J. H. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIOTOUS, $7.60, $4.50, $3.20; DARK MAY, $10.20, $6.10; WAHOOO, $9.30.

RIOTOUS, on run his field early to get to the front, was rated nicely while meeting stout opposition from EBLIS, moved clear when reaching the homestretch and was kept under pressure to the end. DARK MAY worked her way forward on the outside and came with good energy in the closing drive. WAHOOO went in the first flight and finished willingly under strong urging. EBLIS forced a steady pace, made strong challenges, but weakened in the stretch run. TAVERN gained slowly in the last half mile. WAUOH POP was never a threat. RAVENHURST weakened steadily after five furlongs. STRUMMING broke tardily. MERIDIAN TIME was outrun. CHARMING BOY met with no mishaps.

SIXTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, foaled in Maryland. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:48. Off 4:50. Winner, J. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEST POLICY, $8.00, $4.00, $2.90; SANDY BELLE, $3.50, $2.60; FERNBRAKE, $2.90.

BEST POLICY, going in her best form, settled in stride after a half mile to improve her position gradually, worked her way to the leaders midway of the homestretch, then finished determinedly to get up right at the end. SANDY BELLE, rated forwardly, went up fast to displace the leaders entering the homestretch, was placed to punishment, but could not stall off the winner. FERNBRAKE set a steady pace, saved ground all the way and continued gamely when caught. ELAMP could not keep up early and failed to menace in the closing drive. GAY BRIDE showed much speed early, then tired. MILLIE O. came wide in the last half mile. WALMISS was never a factor. BOO'S LETTER was held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:15. Off 5:17½. Winner, R. B. Hall's blk. f. Bobby Schwartz, former Eastern Golden Gloves titleholder from Washington, succumbed to the body attack launched by Calvin McCaslin, of Lock Haven, Pa., in the light-heavyweight scrap last night that featured the St. Mary's Boys Club boxing show in Alexandria's National Guard Armory.

About 1,200 fans saw Schwartz hold the Pennsylvania slugger on even terms throughout the first two rounds, but run into trouble in the third. There were no knockdowns, but Schwartz was hanging on desperately at the end to lose the decision.

The latter went down 11 times in the first two rounds before taking the count after 1:40 of the third. Knockouts were also scored by Francis Smith, of St. Mary's, over Warren Dean and by Carl Steele, of St. Mary's, over Ted Haltman. Steve Brodigan, of Pete's A. C., decisioned Marion Pulzone, and Roy Kannary, of Richmond, decisioned Nick Mancini.

Stock Prices Mostly Lower With Trading Volume Lighter; Japanese Issues Decline in Bond Dealings

New York, July 28.—Financial markets moved erratically, both bonds and stocks showing small changes on both sides wit hthe majority a bit lower. Volume was moderate, big board turnover amounting to 810,650 shares. Wheat and cotton both eased, the former rallying, however, from the day's lows to end ¼ cent to ⅜ lower. Cotton lost 5 to 7 points.

Markets appeared to ignore a continuation of favorable business and industrial news. There was some renewed uneasiness over the foreign situation, Japan more particularly, and Washington gave no signal which could be interpreted as encouraging to the buying side. Price movements in shares and in bonds could be accounted for by what has been the situation right along—a professional market, with tendency to shorten lines just before the week-end. In the last day or so there has been the additional temptation to take profits, which are substantial in many issues.

Steels Dip Despite News

Steels were the principal losers along with grade A rails. These two groups, curiously enough, were painted in the most rosy colors by the news. After the close of the market Thursday, Bethlehem reported earnings which were certainly better than the majority of Wall Street observers had expected, and, in addition, put the common stock back on a dividend basis. It sold up to 63¾ in early dealings today, but fell back for a ¾-point net loss, closing at 63¼. The entire steel group acted in about the same manner, although Youngstown, Birmingham and some of the other large steel centers indicated that a further rise in production schedules will occur next week.

No Profit on Steel Orders

It is probable that any optimism which holders of the steels may have felt at the yeasty appearance of operations was squelched by the realization that a large part of the new business which the companies have been waiting for so long, is being transacted without profit. Mr. Grace, of Bethlehem, made it clear that automobile steel orders for the rest of the year as well as for the second quarter are based on the May prices, representing cuts of $6 to $11 a ton.

Railroads Are Lower

The rails speeded to lower levels all along main and branch lines, although official figures on June net operating income for the carriers, according to ICC figures, was 55.5 per cent ahead of the like month last year. For the first half the improvement was even more spectacular, operating results showing an increase of 132.2 per cent over the like 1938 period.

New Trains Scheduled

At the same time the Pennsylvania and the New York Central placed new crack trains in commission between New York and Chicago, announcing that these have been necessitated by a big bulge in passenger traffic. This did not prevent most of the rail shares, including Central and Pennsylvania, from slipping small fractions. Union Pacific was down 1½. Baltimore & Ohio, one of the most active issues in the group, firmed a small fraction.

Motors Improve

Motors held better than most divisions, General Motors and Studebaker gained a little, and Chrysler lost ⅛, all on active sales. Oils were narrow and with the exception of Standard of New Jersey, on the dull side. Loft, one of the favored stocks, led the list with a ¾-point gain at a new high. There were a few strangers in the active list, including United Merchants & Manufacturers and Burlington Mills.

Bond Trading Quiet

Listed bonds were quiet and irregular on the approach of the week-end, which promises to be slow. Trading in Treasury issues was already affected by the usual dullness of the vacation period, and changes were insignificant. In the corporate section best liens were motionless, while a few bright spots appeared among rails that are apt to be aided by the new Chandler measure. Japanese bonds continued to recede in the foreign section, although others barely moved. Turnover was $5,770,000.

Treasury Issues Lower

Long-term issues of the Treasury were moderately lower, while intermediate-dated bonds tended to advance. The September financing prospects begin to affect the market. Guaranteed loans of the Farm and Home Corporations were idle and motionless. Telephone bonds were steady and there were no movements of any importance among best-grade power and light, railroad and industrial bonds.

Medium-priced railroad bonds varied only by small fractions and in either direction. There was excellent demand, however, for Baltimore & Ohio liens, and a few other low-priced rails also advanced. The holding company and convertible groups remained idle and communications issues receded. Most local traction bonds were marked downward, but the turnover was small.

The move was looked upon as another step by Swiss financiers to establish a haven here for their investments.

Foreign Air Traffic To U. S. Sets Record

By the Associated Press

Record-breaking airplane traffic from foreign countries to the United States was reported today by the Customs Bureau. In the fiscal year which ended June 30, 7,739 airplanes brought 54,799 passengers into the country.

Breaking of this record is assured this fiscal year because of the inauguration of transatlantic service. Last year, 28,513 plane passengers arrived at Miami from Latin America.

Wheat Closes Unsettled on Rain Reports

Rumored Subsidy Cut Also Acts as Factor In Halting Rise

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 28.—An attempt to extend the recovery trend of wheat prices was short-lived today, the market closing unsettled, with two of the three listed contracts unevenly lower.

Private reports of rains in the domestic Northwest and a forecast for showers in Canada encouraged selling. An added bearish factor was a statement of farm officials that the United States export goal, set at 100,000,000 bushels last season and slightly exceeded, may be reduced this season because of the unusually wide spread between domestic and foreign prices. This spread, they said, makes the export subsidy more costly than it was last season because foreign wheat is offered in the world market so much cheaper than domestic grain. Some profit taking also was in evidence.

Early gains of as much as ⅞ cent were wiped out when the market tumbled as much as 1⅞, with May, 1940, contracts the weakest. Prices rallied slightly later but closed ¼ higher to ¾ lower compared with yesterday, September, 64½@64⅝; December, 65⅝@65½. Corn also was irregular, being ⅛ off to ⅜ up, September 41⅝@41½. December 42⅛@42¼. Oats lost ¼ to ¾, rye ¾ to 1⅜ and lard closed unchanged to 5 lower.

Cotton Future Decline Paced by December Selling

New York, July 28 (AP).—The December contract was the bellwether of a declining cotton futures market today. Buyers seemed chary of aggressive action, and closing prices were 5 to 7 points lower.

A leading Wall Street interest was credited with selling about 25,000 bales of December, and prices fell off sharply. Favorable crop news, especially promise of rain in moisture-lacking Western belt areas, was believed to have influenced the December selling.

Buying forces, in the meantime, took it easy, many preferring to await result of operations of the export subsidy before re-entering the market. Buying came from scattered fronts, trade accounts and local professionals taking care of the December offerings. Hedge selling appeared in distant months, and spot houses and trade shorts bought nearby contracts.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A hand described by a young bridge player is shown with the somewhat unusual bidding in today's box. Here is what he says:

"I am sending a rather exotic hand I held Saturday. That night we played some rubber bridge for a few pesos a rubber rather than play poker because we had mistreated the cards so badly the day before.

"At the time this hand came up T. and I were a game in and 90 on the rubber game. We were playing a system in which an opening club bid, followed by either a heart of spade rebid from the opener, showed the major suit to be one of four cards with the hand containing about four honor tricks.

"I bid two clubs just to see what would happen. By the time it was my second turn to bid it was quite obvious that my partner was trying to have some fun. My five club bid scared everybody, including my partner. As it happened, if he does not open the hand we may never get to hold the contract as five in either major might be tried as a save."

North had just the two aces South needed, and seven-odd was made. Even without the favorable diamond lead, seven cannot be stopped. Declarer can draw one round of trumps and then ruff two diamonds in his hand to establish the suit, and dummy's cards will then be high.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Bill H. R. 7395, introduced by Representative Jennings Randolph at the request of the Women's Union, N. F. F. E. Bureau of Engraving and Printing, is now before the House Civil Service Committee.

The bill provides for a blanket differential of 15 per cent in excess of the day rate for all employes on night duty, the union explained yesterday. At the present time only a part of those working on the after-dark shift are receiving this extra amount.

In reporting the Treasury-Postoffice bill, the House Committee stated that all owl hours at the Bureau would be soon abolished. N. F. F. E., however, is pushing the present bill to cover present employes still on the night schedule.

Still getting organized, the new Public Works Recreation Association has elected John Carmody, Federal Works Agency chief, as its honorary president. Col. F. W. Clark, acting commissioner of public works, is president.

Others balloted into key positions this week were Charles A. King, as first vice president; Miss Mary C. Hobson, second vice president; William J. Routhier, secretary; Miss Catherine O'Farrell, recording secretary, and Davis L. Waters, treasurer.

Already 200 applications for membership have been received, although no drives for membership have as yet been really begun.

The P. W. R. A., no half-feathered fledgling, even though it is just out of its shell, will have a get-acquainted cruise in the next four or six weeks . . . and this will mean the weather bureau has turned on some moonlight. There also will be a dance this autumn.

Meanwhile, the P. W. R. A.'s athletic program for this year is continuing under the Interior Recreation Association. The baseball team is scheduled to spike south tomorrow for a diamond debate with the Winchester Stars.

Plans for the organization's new athletic season will include a girls' bowling league with about 10 or 12 teams.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said the tomato is just another Horatio Alger when he spoke at the recent Indiana Tomato Festival. There was plenty of hand exercise from the Hoosiers on that one. The sink or swim, do or die fruit (which sometimes is misnamed a vegetable) was imported from Peru by European Andes climbers about 400 years ago. It wasn't until 1865, continued Wallace, that the first North American variety was grown by Henry Tilden out in Davenport, Iowa.

Now the old-fashioned "love apple" which was once considered simon-pure poison if you ate it, has garnered new fame. With vitamins A, B, C, and D, it's been added to the list of surplus commodities available under the food stamp plan in Rochester, Dayton, Seattle and Birmingham.

Those horseshoe tournaments under the auspices of the Maritime Recreation Association won't start until August, but the entrants are getting in plenty of practice now. The shoes are already flying through the heat and humidity at the courts opposite the Commerce Building.

The tournaments aren't the only thing the maritimers are interested in. They're already talking about the summer dance which will go on the floor of the Indian Spring Club the evening of August 18. This marks the second year for the dances. They follow the seasons—one for spring, summer, winter and fall.

But if you really want Bill Kirsch, director of the fun division of the Maritime outfit, to start talking, say something about the group's softball team.

They're C. A. F., 7 at $2,600; C. A. F., at $3,200; C. A. F., 10 at $3,500, and C. A. F., 11 at $3,800 . . . all fiscal examiners.

Mexico's Hollywood is having a tough time with its home-made movies, according to the Commerce Department. The Rio Grande's dark-and-handsome aren't packing them in even when the management gives away free chinaware. Now the producers are asking the Government to do something definite.

After making the movie companies promise not to put on any $1,000,000 films, Federal District authorities are going to enact legislation which will force the local motion picture pashas to set aside 12 complete weeks each year for the exclusive showing of Mexican-made films.

This seems to be a far, far plaint from the time when Mexican actors didn't even have to speak English very well to keep the ushers earning their money in American theaters.

About five minutes after the exhibition at the Civil Service Commission opened on Thursday morning, a man looking at the pictures which show what Federal employes are doing all over the country, suddenly stopped in front of one of them, and exclaimed, "Why, that's my nephew!" The young fellow in the photo, who was engaged in a surveying job, had only recently entered the Reclamation Service.

Another picture in the collection is of a woman employe at the State Department operating the formidable machine which stamps the seal of the United States on official documents. Still another shows men doing inspection work on an airplane for the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

For the more usual occupations, the commission chose a shot of a postman on the job and, according to Hathaway of the information bureau, it's one of the nicest photos in the show.

The exhibition, the first of its kind, is going to be a permanent affair. The commission has more material than it has space, so that changes in the exhibit will be made from time to time.

NUTS AND JOLTS

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

CHAPTER 33

HE WENT to the smoke-house and cut strips of 'gator tail for the dogs. He was ready. He trudged through the yard to the lot to take up the trail. He whistled for the dogs and put Julia on the track. She bayed, and was off. Jody looked after him in a panic. His gun was not loaded, he had on no shoes, and he could not remember where he had left his jacket. He knew from the set of Penny's back that it was useless to beg him to wait. He scrambled about, gathering up his belongings. He shouted to his mother to put bread and potatoes in his shotbag, too.

M. K. Rawlings

She said, "You're like to be in for it. Your Pa's locked horns with that bear. I know him."

He called to Flag and tore madly after his father and the dogs. Their pace was swift. He was out of breath by the time he caught up to them. Old Julia was jubilant on the fresh trail. Her voice, her merry tail, her easy lope, showed plainly that this was the thing above all others she wished to be doing. Flag kicked up his heels and ran beside her.

"He'll not be so frisky," Penny said ominously, "do old Slewfoot raise up in front of him."

A mile to the west they found the remains of the calf. The old bear, kept perhaps by his injuries inflicted by the Forresters' boar, from recent hunting, had eaten heavily. The carcass was well covered with trash.

Penny said, "He's due to lay up not too far away, figgerin' on comin' back."

But the animal followed no rules. The trail continued. It led nearly to Forresters Island, swung north and west and skirted Hopkins Prairie to the north. The wind was strong from the southwest and Penny said that it was almost certain old Slewfoot was not far ahead of them, but had winded them.

The pace was rapid and the distance so long that in the late morning even Penny was obliged to stop for a rest. The dogs were willing to continue, but their heaving sides and hanging tongues showed that they, too, were weary. Penny stopped on a high live oak island by a clear pond on the prairie for the dogs to drink. He threw himself on the ground in the sunlight. He lay on his back without speaking. His eyes were closed. Jody lay down beside him. The dogs dropped flat on their bellies. Flag was unwearied and pranced about the island. Jody watched his father. They had never come so hard and so fast. Here was not the joy of the chase, the careless pitting of man's brain against creature speed and cunning. This was hate and revenge and there was no happiness in it.

Penny opened his eyes and rolled over on his side and opened his shotbag and took out his lunch. Jody took out his own. They ate without speaking. The biscuits and cold baked sweet potato seemed almost savorless. Penny threw a few strips of the 'gator meat to the dogs. They gnawed contentedly. It was all one to them whether Penny hunted casually or with a desperate intent. The game was the same, the strong sweet trail, and the good fight at the end. Penny sat upright and swung to his feet.

"All right. Time to git goin'."

THE SIESTA had been brief. Jody's shoes were heavy on his feet. The trail led into scrub, then out again, back to Hopkins Prairie. Old Slewfoot was trying to shake the dogs. Their scent still came to him. Penny was obliged to stop twice in the afternoon to rest. He was furious.

"Dog take it, time was I didn't have to stop," he said.

Yet each time that he set out again his walk was so fast that Jody was tired out from following him. He dared not say so. Only Flag frisked and frolicked. The long trek was a casual jaunt for his long legs. The trail led almost to Lake George, cut back sharply south, and again, to the east, lost itself in the dusk of the swamp. The sun was setting and visibility was low in the shadows.

Penny said, "Uh-huh. He's fixin' to come back and feed on that calf agin. We'll go home and fool him."

The distance back to Baxter's Island was not great, but it seemed to Jody that he could never make it. On any other hunt, he could have said so and Penny would have waited for him patiently. His father moved toward home as doggedly and relentlessly as he had left it. It was dark when they reached it, but Penny at once loaded the great bear trap on the slide, hitched Caesar to it and dragged it to the site of the hill. He allowed Jody to ride on the slide. He himself walked beside Caesar, leading him. Jody stretched out his aching legs with relief. Flag had lost interest and hung around the kitchen door.

Jody called, "Ain't you tired, Pa?"

Jody held a fatwood torch for him while he lifted the ragged carcass with sticks, in order to leave no human taint, baited the trap and set it, and scratched leaves and rubbish over it with a pine bough. Penny squatted on the slide for the ride home, dropping the reins and allowing old Caesar to pick his own way. He put up the horse and found gratefully that Ma Baxter had done the milking. They went to the house. Hot supper was on the table and he ate quickly and lightly, then went directly to his bed.

"Ory, what'd you take to rub my back with panther oil?"

She came and worked on him with big strong hands. He groaned with the comfort of it. Jody stood watching. Penny rolled over and dropped his head on the pillow with a sigh.

"How you makin' it, boy? Had enough?"

"I feel good sincet I ate."

"Uh. A boy's strength rise and fall on his belly. Ory."

"What?"

"I want breakfast before crack o' day."

HE CLOSED his eyes and was asleep. Jody went to bed and lay a moment aching, then he too passed beyond hearing of Ma Baxter clattering in the kitchen, laying out materials for the early breakfast.

He slept through the first sounds in the morning. He awakened, still drowsy. He stretched. He was stiff. He heard his father's voice in the kitchen. Evidently Penny was in the same grim mood as yesterday and had not even thought to call him. He got out of bed and pulled on his shirt and breeches and went sleepily to the kitchen with his shoes in his hand. His hair was shaggy in his eyes.

Penny said, "Mornin', feller. You ready for more?"

He nodded.

"That's the spirit."

He was too sleepy to eat much. He rubbed his eyes and dallied with his food.

He said, "Aint it too soon to see?"

"Time we git there it'll jest be soon enough. I aim to creep up on him, do he be suspicious and jest sniffin' around."

Penny rose and leaned a moment on the table. He grinned wryly.

"I'd feel right good," he said, "if my back wasn't broke smack in two."

The black morning was bitter cold. Ma Baxter had made up the wool from Jacksonville into hunting jackets and jeans for both of them. They seemed too fine to wear, but walking slowly through the pine woods they wished they had put them on. The dogs were still sleepy and tired and were willing to follow silently at heel. Penny put his finger in his mouth and lifted it to test any imperceptible stirring of air. There seemed to be none and he went in a direct line toward the baited trap. It was in a place that was comparatively open and he halted a hundred yards away. Day was breaking in the east behind them. He slapped the dogs lightly and they dropped to the ground. Jody grew numb with the cold. Penny was shivering in his thin clothes and ragged jacket. Jody saw old Slewfoot in every stump and behind every tree. Interminably slow, the sun rose.

Penny whispered, "If he's ketched, he's dead, for I've heered nothin'."

THEY CREPT forward with lifted guns. The trap was exactly as they had left it the night before. There was not light enough to make certain of the tracks, to determine whether the wary creature had come and been suspicious and gone away. They rested their guns against a tree and swung their arms and stamped their feet to warm themselves.

"If he's been here," Penny said, "he ain't fur away. Ol' Julia'll jump him right quick."

The light was without warmth, but it spread through the forest. Penny walked forward, bent low to the ground. Julia was snuffing silently.

Penny said, "I be dogged, I jest be dogged."

Even Jody could see that the only tracks were the day-old ones.

"He ain't been anywhere near," Penny said. "He wouldn't foller a rule to save him."

He straightened and called in the dogs and turned back for home.

"Anyways," he said, "we know where he left off yestiddy."

He did not speak again until they reached the house. He went to his room and pulled on his new hunting clothes over the old thin ones.

He called to the kitchen, "Ma, put me up meal and bacon and salt and coffee and all the cooked rations you got. Put 'em in the knapsack. And scorch me some more rags for my tinderhorn."

"Must I put on my new things, too?"

Ma Baxter came to the door of the room with the knapsack. Penny paused in his dressing.

"Now boy, you're plumb welcome to go. But git this in your head and git it good. This is nary pleasure hunt. Hit's cold weather and hit'll mebbe be hard goin' and cold campin'. I jest ain't comin' home again until I git that bear. Now you still want to go?"

"Yes."

"Then git ready."

Ma Baxter glanced at the sheet over the black alpaca dress.

She said weakly, "Ezra—tomorrer's Christmas Eve."
